

Editor's Introduction (Winter 2012)

Welcome to Didache: Faithful Teaching Volume 11: 2. This edition incorporates some of the changes we announced last edition. We have actually one of our more diverse offerings including three global regions (Africa, Mesoamerica and USA) and a new collaborative with Nazarene Educators Worldwide. In all, the theme might be “holistic” issues in teaching/learning including issues of context (including immigrant challenges) content (disciplinary considerations), teaching, and assessing learning. While a number of our presentations revolve more around insights into practice, the journal as a whole really embodies its mission quite well: seeking intersections between education, culture and faith. Perhaps the subtitle of the journal says it all, this edition models “faithful teaching” through the various issues addressed in the writings.

Catching up the deadlines remain a bit of a challenge so our apologies once more for a March rather than January publication. We hope to make a July deadline for the summer edition (more at the bottom of the introduction for faculty with sound student publications for the next edition).

See the link below to read the remainder of the editor's introduction.

Introduction

Papers are in PDF format which requires Adobe Reader . Click title link to open PDF file.

INTRODUCTION Dean G. Blevins

Table of Contents

Can Faith Be Divorced From The Public Square? Gift Mtukwa, Africa Nazarene University

El Fenómeno De La Migración En Guatemala. Ela Gonzalez, Iglesia del Nazareno de Chimaltenango, Guatemala

Assessing Dissertations In A Doctorate Of Education Program. Esther Swink, and Richard Parrot Trevecca Nazarene University

A Call For Civility. Porter King, Trevecca Nazarene University

The Bible As A Community Encounter: An Essay On Challenges For Faculty And Students Of Scripture. David A. Ackerman, Ph.D., Pastor, Buhl Church of the Nazarene, Buhl, ID

Designing Seminary Expectations . Laura Felleman, Ph.D., Pastor, First United Methodist Church of Plattsmouth, NE