

The Crusader

Volume 54 - No. 5

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God"

October 26, 1999

A Tribute to Michael Bankston

Family and campus community mourn the passing of a well-loved music professor / 9-11

What's Inside

Holland and Crystal Lewis inspire, entertain and challenge during Spiritual Emphasis Week / 4-5

NNU's Cross Country team ranks among nation's best / 16

Column One

Tonight the Crusader staff has reason to celebrate. Our copy editor Will, returned from Malta at midnight, and he brought back a lot of nice booty for us. For example, he brought me the Mediterranean Sea. Seriously, he brought me back an eight ounce bottle of salt water that he personally retrieved from the great sea. I drank some of it so I could say I was carrying the Mediterranean sea inside me. What a thrill.

Tonight Brooke and I wanted to try pizza with anchovies on it. The entire staff gorged themselves on anchovies. Everybody was in a trance-like state while both hands continuously shoved more and more anchovies down their throats. When all the pizza was gone, we were all still hungry for more of those yummy fish. Looking around, I saw the entire staff had soaking wet shirts due to the build up of saliva forming at the corner of their mouths.

The computers are being very bad tonight. Brooke put it best when she told her computer, "You're being naughty." This didn't help the situation. It only increased the animosity between her computer and herself.

We didn't publish last week, so it felt good to get back in the office and get in our groove. On a serious note, I think everybody misses this old office when they aren't here. How could we not?

Nathan R. Hydes

Nathan Hydes
Co-editor in chief

Publication Info

The Crusader is printed at The Press-Tribune in Nampa, Id. and is distributed free on campus every Tuesday during the school year.

The publishing authority of The Crusader is the SGA Publications Board: Brandi Blacklock, Shawn Blenker, Gil Craker, Gary Waller, Nathan Hydes, Amber Jerome, Sara Keller, Jeremy Klosterman, Chris Gintz, Monica Olson, Angela Paschal, Jody Lanham, and Bob Van Allen.

The Crusader
NNU 623 Holly St.
Nampa, Idaho 83686
(208) 467-8656
Fax: (208) 467-8468
crusader@student.nnu.edu

Learning patience and love with Pals

by Sarah Pearson
Crusader Campus Staff Writer

Pals is Northwest Nazarene University's ministry to high school students with special education needs. The group meets every other Saturday for bowling, miniature golfing, pizza parties and other fun events with the youth. They have parties for the bigger holidays like Halloween, Christmas and Easter.

The kids that the Pals ministry's students play with include ADHD (Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder), Downs Syndrome and handicapped youth. The group plays with the youths, bringing smiles to the faces of both the NNU students and the high school students.

Pals ministry can be a life-changing experience. Anna Ganske, president of Pals, says that when she started in with the club her freshman year she was an English major; she is now a special education major. "The kids are absolutely loving, and so much fun to be around!"

When Melissa Lambert, a junior and a former President of Pals who was raised around special education children (her mother is a special ed teacher), found out her freshman year that Northwest Nazarene College had a club for these kids, she jumped at the chance to join in. "This club is so fun," she said. "It is especially good at teaching you patience in a big way. These kids need one-on-one help, someone to constantly talk to. This ministry is great if you are a special education major; it gives you a small taste of what your future job might be like."

She also tells how she bonded with one boy named Kevin. "It was his birthday and we were at his house. He wanted to watch the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers movie, but nobody else but me wanted to. So we watched it together, and now whenever we see each other we do those Power Rangers moves."

Pals meets every other Satur-

Carrie Goldsmith and Ami Self encourage Spencer Sessions, a Pals Ministry Club youth, as he paints his pumpkin for Halloween. Pals Ministry is NNU's ministry club to high school students with special education needs.

day in the Student Center to spend some time with the kids. If you're interested in helping out, contact club president, Anna Ganske, at 8477.

Serving others at the heart of RUSH

by Sarah Pearson
Crusader Campus Staff Writer

This past Saturday, NNU students participated in RUSH (aRe yoU Serving Him) 1999. Students raked leaves, beautified highways, cleaned windows and much more around the Nampa homes and area. RUSH is an annual event, every fall, when NNU students go out into the community and help to clean up trash or help older or handicapped residents. Students from all classes (frosh to senior) worked side by side with others in the community.

Jill Bramhall, a junior transfer student, worked first at a nearby park with other helpers from the community, then at the home of a parapalegic where they raked leaves and piled firewood. "It's so much fun," she said. "This is a great way to get out into the community. We really should do things like this more often. We worked with some of the kids from Jobcorp, and I invited them to church."

Jenelle Smith, another junior, worked with two older ladies, one of whom used to work at NNU. She did chores around their house, such as raking and cleaning windows. "It was real neat, and the ladies were so nice!"

Several NNU students worked with others in the community, doing odd jobs alongside these groups. Jeremy Smith, one of Dooley Hall's PAs, did chores with at-risk kids, washing windows and raking leaves at six different homes. Jobcorp, a group that takes young at-risk children and teaches them a trade while giving them community service opportunities, was also along with this group and several other groups helping them with their various projects.

There were interesting moments this year, at least for some of the students. One group, working at a local park, found some insulin syringes and needles; a girl in the group almost found one of the needles the hard way.

All of the people who participated said they had a lot of fun; many said they wished NNU would do more events like this. While many of the clubs have smaller scale clean-up events, such as raking leaves or helping others in the community, R.U.S.H. is definitely the biggest of such events for fall.

Brian Staffenson, Jenelle Smith and James Bowser clean windows for two elderly women during NNU's annual RUSH Saturday. RUSH, which happens every fall, is a chance for NNU students to lend a helping hand to the community.

Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.

604 12TH AVE S.
461-4600

NOW HIRING DELIVERY DRIVERS $9-12/HOUR
FLEXIBLE HOURS

DELIVERY HOURS
11 AM-12:30 AM SUNDAY-THURSDAY
11 AM-1:30 AM FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

DORM WARS

PAPA JOHN'S PIZZA WOULD LIKE TO GIVE A PIZZA PARTY TO THE DORM THAT ORDERS THE MOST PIZZA BETWEEN OCTOBER 24-NOVEMBER 24, 1999.

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

1 LARGE
1-TOPPING PIZZA

FOR ONLY
$5.99
DELIVERED!!!

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

ADD A CHEESE STICK
$3.49
OR BREAD STICK
$2.49

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

ADD A
2-LITER BOTTLE
$1.99
20 oz.
$.99

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

Crystal Lewis shares her heart with NNU students

by Kari Wilde

Crusader Campus Section Editor

Crystal Lewis took some time after Thursday's chapel to answer some questions for The Crusader. This is what she had to say:

Crusader: When did you become a Christian?

Crystal: The first time I remember consciously taking the initiative, making the effort to ask questions and asking someone to pray with me, I think I was about eight. I went into my mom's bedroom and asked her to pray with me. So I really remember making that conscious decision at eight or nine.

Crusader: When you were younger, like in middle school or high school, did you even think you would be where you are today?

Crystal: No. I have friends that tell me that I talked about it, but I don't remember thinking "this is what I want to do forever," maybe cause I started so young at 15 years old recording. Maybe I thought I was too young to do it forever. But no, I never realized I would do it to this extent.

Crusader: How did you know that singing was what God wanted you to do?

Crystal: When I got married, I was nineteen. My husband had another job for a little while but he ended up quitting his job and it was like we both realized at the same time together that this is what we're supposed to do. We're supposed to do this together. Not me do it and him get behind me or stand next to me, but do it together. And that's when I realized that this is a life long deal, this is a calling more than just a career. And we realized it together.

Crusader: Was it like some great epiphany or something?

Crystal: No, it was more like a gradual thing. I don't remember a specific night where we both went "this is the thing." It was gradual. The doors kept opening or closing. Closing for him (her husband). He was a photographer and graphic artist and that job kind of fizzled out. We were writing together and it just kind of all came together. It's really amazing to look back now and see how the pieces fit together and realize it was on purpose.

Crusader: How did it happen that you started recording?

Crystal: I had a friend who called my mom and said there's going to be an audition at this church for this new musical. You should take Crystal. So my mom took me, I went and auditioned, and we made a record for this musical called High Tops. Oddly enough, I didn't really sing in it. I did the record, and I sang in the little ensemble, but my character was more of a character character. It was just silly and fun and funny. I didn't really do any serious singing at all. But through it, I met a guy that was in a band, and I ended up quitting the musical and joining the band. That band was called Wild Blue Yonder. The group was basically already involved with a record label, so I just walked into this perfect situation and it just kind of snowballed from there.

Crusader: Who or what has influenced your music and your ministry?

Crystal: My parents have really influenced my ministry. My sisters have influenced the ministry aspect of things a great deal. My younger sister especially, who has her life focused on ministry, service. She's amazing to watch. Musically, people like CeCe Winnans and Andre Crouch.

Crusader: How have they influenced you?

Crystal: That was just what I grew up listening to. That's what I like. I grew up listening to Michael Jackson, Aretha Franklin, and that kind of music. And CeCe in my opinion is the best singer out there, period. In mainstream or Christian music, she's the best. And the quality of the voice is of utmost importance to me, so that's probably why. And then, for CeCe too, I think, just her interesting involvement with different mainstream artists. Yet just her life is very apparent in what she does on stage, and what she believes is very obvious. There's no compromise there at all. She's just a really neat lady.

Crusader: What do you see as the purpose of your singing?

Crystal: I don't know. I wonder sometimes what it is honestly. It takes different forms at different times. It's like life in general, you think you've got it figured out at one point. You think, "Oh, this is what I'm doing." Then something changes in either your mind or your spirit or life circumstances and you think, "Wait a minute, is really what I'm supposed to do? What am I doing?" So it changes form time to time. But I am convinced wholeheartedly that God has placed me in this position for a reason and I may never know the reason. But I know that His word never returns void. So as long as I'm speaking and singing His word, then there

Photo by Jenelle Smith

Popular Christian singer, Crystal Lewis, came to NNU on Wednesday and Thursday of Spiritual Emphasis Week. She came with her father, Holland Lewis, this year's chapel speaker for Spiritual Emphasis Week.

is right in that.

Crusader: It's easy to see that you enjoy your singing and your ministry, but does that joy ever go away?

Crystal: Yes, it does. I shouldn't say the joy goes away. I guess just sometimes it's more difficult than others like if I'm struggling vocally or something. I take my kids with me a lot, but there's times when I can't. Sometimes it's nice to get away and other times it's a struggle and you think, "I don't want to leave. I want to have a normal life and have a decent schedule, order of things in my life." And nothing is normal, at least compared to what most of my friends do, and that makes it hard sometimes. But I realize again that not everybody is cut out for it. And that makes it a special thing. God has called us to do it. We can do it and we're capable of doing it. So there's times that it gets difficult, but I don't think the joy ever goes away.

Crusader: Have you had to make a lot of sacrifices because of your career?

Crystal: Yes, just the fact that it's hard to let roots grow down really deep. You really know who your friends are because your schedule is so sporadic and crazy that people have to wait around for you sometimes. Not that you expect people's lives to be on hold while you're gone for three months. But you really know the friends that are willing to drop everything if you're home for a weekend and that's it. You know the people that are really your friends by the ones that will drop everything and say, "Okay, I'll cancel that to be with you." They are very few and far between. Those are the kinds of sacrifices. We try to establish as much normalcy as possible for the kids. They both are in school. And we try to keep that consistent.

Crusader: Would you say it's worth it?

Crystal: Yes. But then you have the sacrifices of just the spotlight and things like that which can be very difficult. You have to be totally aware that your life is an open book in many ways, not in every way. But you have to just know how to deal with it.

Crusader: You've mentioned you kids a couple of times. How many do you have?

Crystal: I have two. Five and three, a boy and girl.

Crusader: What do you hope that people get out of your music?

Crystal: Lots of things. I want to do the kind of music that I like and that other people like. I hope that people get out of it sincerity and that they get the message, that the non-compromising things come across. That whoever listens to it gets what they need out of it because we all listen to things and get totally different things out of it. I want God to use it in whatever capacity He sees fit in different circumstances and different lives.

Crusader: How would you classify your music? What style would you say it is?

Crystal: I suppose it falls under the pop umbrella. But nowadays, everything does. I don't have a specific classification, but it's got a lot of R and B, a lot of gospel, a lot of rock. It's a little bit of everything kind of mixed together.

Crusader: Do you have favorite kind of music?

Crystal: No, I listen to pretty much everything. I prefer really great black worship. But I like everything, almost everything.

Crusader: What is a normal week's schedule like for you?

Crystal: It's always different. When I'm home, I'm doing the car pool deal to school, picking up and taking my daughter to preschool, fixing dinner, going to the office a couple days a week and doing interviews. And then other weeks, I'm gone for a whole week and not home at all. Still other weeks, like this week, I'm gone for two days and then I'm home. When I travel, there's a lot of catch up work that has to be done, especially during the holidays and birthdays. There's just always things thrown in.

Crusader: What advice would you give to aspiring musicians?

Crystal: Be content with what they have and not strive superhard. My advice is to not sit back and not do anything and assume that things are just going to happen. But to do that in a sense spiritually. To sit back and not feel like, "This is what I want and I'm going to do anything I can to get it." To go through the doors that are open, to take the initiative and make the effort to knock on them, but to also be content with what God has for you, knowing that that might not be what you want. I've had to deal with that. It's taken me 15 years to get any kind of recognition at all. And that's a long time. That's my whole 20s. While I don't regret anything happening the way that it did, I rather enjoy the slow process of things. But it's hard to deal with sometimes. You think, "I should be here at this level," and you have to sit back and say, "Okay God, I know that I'm where you want me to be right now and this may be where you want me to stay and that's okay. That's a hard thing to come to terms with if you really want something, but that's, I think, the best advice because it keeps you humble and keeps you grounded."

Continued on page 5 as Lewis.

Lewis continued from page 4:

Crusader: Do you have any advice for college students in general?

Crystal: Yes. I really do wish (that when I was in college) I would have applied myself and not been so concerned so much about my boyfriend (who is now my husband) and so concerned about other things. I wish I would have got it together, and said "I'm here to study and here to learn." Now I want to learn. I would just encourage people to soak up the knowledge they can gain here because it really will benefit them for the rest of their lives. Even if you don't use it for ten years and then you have kids, you can really impart some amazing wisdom and knowledge. And not just to children but to friends and brothers and sisters and who knows who you'll come in contact with later on in work situations or church situations or home situations. The things that you learn here, not just academically, but also socially and emotionally and spiritually, will affect the rest of your life, literally. And not necessarily all at the same time, but in bits and pieces. I think you'll be amazed, people will be amazed as you go through life with how much you drastically change. And the things you can learn in a place like this will help you adapt to that change better and they will help facilitate the change.

Crusader: Do you have a favorite scripture you would like to share?

Crystal: The one that I'm most in touch with, in tune with right now, my dad's favorite verse that has become my verse, he calls it his life verse, is 2 Timothy 1:7 which says "God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of sound mind." I love that it addresses a problem and then it gives the solution.

Pastor Holland Lewis challenges students

by Carrie Goldsmith

Crusader Campus Staff Writer

Every year "Spiritual Emphasis Week" reminds us to keep our lives focused in the right direction.

It is a week to put aside a little slice of our daily routines, and center our attention on God. Last week our speaker, Rev. Holland Lewis, reminded students of God's call on our lives. It is a personal, holy, and unique call that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Spirit gives to each of us.

Lewis' messages throughout the week were actually one ongoing message with three principles. The first principle is "Break away from the old." God is always up to something new in us. Like Philippians 1:6 tells us, God is never finished, and He will always bring to completion what He has begun. Even when it seems like there is no answer and that God has left us alone, He is up to something!

2 Timothy 1:7 assures us that "God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power, love and of self-discipline." To remind us of the newness we have in Christ, Lewis used verses from Ezekiel 11 and 18, as well as Lamentations 3 and the Gospels. He asserted that if one "cut the scriptures anywhere, you will find a message of new hope and beginnings." We are continually needing to learn and grow.

Some challenging questions that Lewis ended Monday morning with are the following:

- Do you know God as One who is fresh, vibrant, and creative?
- Are you open to Him? (In your relationships, attitudes, habits, ministries, etc.)
- When did you last let go and let God do what He wants to do in you?

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Lewis shared with the students about principle two, "Behold the promise." God has given us a promise of a plan for our lives. Not only is our calling from God, but it is from the whole Godhead trinity. Lewis stated, "The delegation has met and the plans are made for our lives." God has called each one of us to a different place, and He will not leave us unfinished or alone.

Reverend Holland Lewis, pastor of Yakima West Valley Church of the Nazarene, was the speaker for this year's Spiritual Emphasis Week.

We must consider and focus on a fresh strategy for a new life and faith. Lewis talked about how God will bring us from one level of Christlikeness to another, making us more like Jesus constantly. God is never done in our lives; we can always grow. Lewis mentioned a 101 year-old woman who was "looking forward to what God is going to do in her life." If she can be growing, anyone can!

Thursday and Friday's chapels students were taught principle three, "Believe your way into the future." God works in each of us in special, unique ways. Discovering the will of God will be the most significant thing in our lives, besides our actual commitment to God in the first place. Lewis proclaimed that "we need to be infected with the virus of Jesus and spread it around the valley!"

He emphasized the need for daily prayer in each of our lives. Jesus needed to do it, and we need to do it as well. "Talking is to the soul what jogging is for the body." He challenged us to five minutes a day of reading the Bible, just as he was years ago. Listening to God is the only way we will know

His call on our lives. It is not parents, friends, teachers, or church members that call us to certain things, but God alone!

God's ultimate call for each of us is to become conformed to the image of Christ so that we can show excellence and joy in all that we do. We must convey God's message of love to those around us. God's calling is high, but He will never leave us until He is finished what He has started!

One highlight of spiritual emphasis week was Time Out on Wednesday night with Holland Lewis and his daughter Crystal. There were more people in attendance than ever. It was a very homey time that we got to sit in on a dad and daughter talk.

Crystal sang a few songs and told us a little about her life. She is a spunky, outgoing, talkative, vibrant woman! There were two main points Holland Lewis had for us at Time Out. He emphasized needing to love others and that if you call yourself a Christian, you are held to the same standard as someone in the spotlight, like his daughter Crystal. He said, "God will use your willingness. That is all He needs to get through to someone."

When interviewed, Lewis was very open about his life. It was apparent that he lives out his message everyday. His favorite verses are the ones he shared on Monday's chapel, 1 Timothy 1:7 and Isaiah 43:18-19. He feels that his most important role as a minister is preaching the Word and loving the people. Loving people became a resounding theme as Lewis talked about preaching. He loves people, and his advice for those going into ministry was that you must love people! Relationships are the key to bringing people into the kingdom.

When asked about being the father of a famous musician, Lewis responded that he "celebrates her achievements." She is normal to him, and he thinks it is actually a lot of fun. He knows that she is real and has an authentic, powerful ministry. He praised Crystal for her commitment to her family and said, "She takes her work seriously, but does not take herself seriously." That is very important in any profession. He loves seeing Crystal in concert and is very proud of her accomplishments.

Spiritual emphasis week was a powerful time for those who were listening to God's voice in their lives. God's call is not easy, but with Him, we can do anything. Lewis' advice for college students was that we should "be real, authentic people who can demonstrate Christlikeness in their lives by living in the Word."

Crystal Lewis and Holland Lewis shared in a special father/daughter presentation during Time Out last Wednesday night. Crystal Lewis also sang a few songs for all in attendance at this special Time Out.

Concern with student lifestyles

This is the first in a series of articles from student development to address different topics of concern in a preventative manner; to offer gentle reminders and information which may help you or someone else on this campus avoid "becoming entangled" (Heb 12:1) in things that detract from the goals at NNU.

Though we strive to build community and support each other at NNU, this campus and its inhabitants are not immune from harmful influences and pressures (ie. students come and go, as well as visitors come and go). As someone said, "It's an open campus, and we want it that way."

What about drug/alcohol use, abuse, and addiction? There are a multitude of reasons why and how people become entangled in the unhealthy use and practice of drug and alcohol issues. A few to consider: to lessen fears of inferiority or emotional pain, to be accepted as part of the social "in-group," to seek chemical balance within their own brain chemistry, or to experience escape from boredom or failure.

Experimental dabbling leads to addiction and prescription meds lead to dependence, the list can go on and on. Its variety is as broad as the spectrum of human personalities. Each individual case may have similarities to others as well as unique differences.

Whatever the reason, an important aspect is to catch it early—the earlier the better. The amount of time and energy required to turn someone around is immeasurably increased as the abuse of drugs/alcohol accelerates and gains momentum over time. But it is never too late.

We, at NNU, have the opportunity and responsibility to help someone before that logistical curve seems overwhelming and insurmountable. Remember, no one here is totally immune. Statistics and the quantity of people on this campus put a certain percentage, though small, at high-risk. Will you be the person who can lovingly help steer them back onto a better course? YOU don't have to be an expert in the field to show care and genuine concern.

A few signs and symptoms to watch for in yourself or others include: loss of interest in family and friends; loss of interest in activities which were once of interest; wide mood fluctuations; not fulfilling normal promises or obligations; difficulty in sleep and/or eating habits; or using any kind of substance to cope with personal problems (not prescribed by an M.D.). Awareness in yourself and those around you helps make prevention a concrete reality.

Other things to ponder may include: As a Christian, what are our responsibilities? Would you confront or report a person if you thought they had a problem? How does binge drinking or other drug use effect one's Christian witness? How does one know when it's time to get help?

Addictions come in a variety of forms and "hidden opportunities." Forming healthy habits and lifestyle patterns helps leave no time for these other things to have entrance into your life. Know that even a seemingly small gesture of kindness or word of encouragement may help somebody nearby (in a moment of feeling lonely or isolated) to avert the temptation to seek solace in wrong places.

The small things do add up, good or bad. What does this add up to? We know so much more today about human personalities and the labyrinths of chemical addiction, why is there still the obvious cultural and societal problem of drug and alcohol addiction? There may not be a simple, pat answer to that question...

Jesus said, "Come to me, all who are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." How are we to give "rest" to those around us, especially those in need of breaking free from unhealthy addictions, drug/alcohol or otherwise?

Fresheree brought laughs

Missy Rasmussen enthusiastically introduces her next guest, Tracy Rummer, NNU's very own Joyologist, for her talk show at Fresheree. Rummer was promoting her new best seller "I Kiss Dating All the Time!" Rasmussen and Rummer's act was the first act of this year's Fresheree and set the mood for the acts to follow. Fresheree is put on every year by the Sophomore Class Council and consists of approximately two hours of talented, and some not-so-talented, hilariously funny acts.

The 50s Pink Cadillac Diner

The 50s Pink Cadillac Diner in Sodexo-Marriott on Saturday provided great dinner entertainment and a relaxing environment. Here, Sophomores Esther Heath, Gina Meis, Kara Lyons, Sarah Smith, Andrea Trepus, Laura Luckey, and Jayme Harding see who can make the biggest Bazooka bubble. Throughout the dinner of burgers, fries and flavored cokes, there were decade-specific competitions such as an oldies Name-That-Tune contest and a hula-hoop contest. The other entertainment included three student lip-sync artists and a re-run of a favorite old show, Happy Days.

Info on change to semesters

ACADEMIC CALENDAR-2000-2001

Fall Semester--70 class days

Aug 31-Sept 4	Thur-Mon.	New Student Orientation and Registration
Sept 4	Mon	Returning Student Registration
Sept 5	Tues	Classes Begin
Sept 22	Fri	Faculty Retreat
Oct 27	Fri	Faculty In-service
Nov 23-25	Thur-Sat	Thanksgiving/Homecoming
Dec 15	Fri	Last Day of Undergraduate Classes
Dec 18-21	Mon-Thur	Final Exams

Spring Semester--72 class days

Jan 15, 2001	Mon	Check-In/Registration
Jan 16	Tue	Classes Begin
Feb 19	Mon	President's Day - No Undergraduate Classes
Mar 10-18	Sat-Sun	Semester Break
April 13	Fri	Good Friday - No Undergraduate Classes
May 4	Fri	Classes End
May 7-10	Mon-Thur	Final Exams
May 11	Fri	Baccalaureate
May 12	Sat	Commencement

Q How will courses taken under the quarter system count for the semester system?

A Courses taken under the quarter system will count the same in

Klu Klux Klan gather unmasked in New York

by Heather Oglevie
World News Staff Writer

NEW YORK, NY - In a certain irony Saturday, the Klu Klux Klan was the target of an even greater reasonless hatred than they had seemed to support in all their years of existence. Twenty Klan members, including two women, were surrounded by a large and hostile crowd of around 8,000.

The members had gathered outside the Manhattan State's Supreme Court building in New York City to peaceably celebrate white pride, but in the end were forced, for their own safety, to stand in a protective pen of barricades ringed by police officers in riot helmets.

Several protestors made a rush at the barricades, intending to break through and physically attack the Klan members, which resulted in seven arrests.

After the demonstration, a Klan supporter who engaged in vocal debate with one of the protestors was surrounded by other hostile persons who kicked and spit at her. They chased her down the street, where police took her into protective custody and later released her.

The Klan members, denied a permit to use a sound system in the city, stood inside their pen in silence while protestors yelled "Go home, Klan! This is New York!"

National imperial wizard of the American Knights of the Klu Klux Klan, Jeffrey Berry, is bitter about this overwhelming wave of mass hatred. "We can't get our message out," he said. "We are silenced." He insists that while they intended to promote white pride, it was not at the expense of any other racial group, black, Hispanic or Jewish.

However modest their intentions, anti-Klan incidents ran rampant. Before the intended demonstration, a man claiming to be a Klan supporter came up to grand wizard James Sheehy and punched him in the face, yelling, "Death to the Klan!" Police officers quickly took the man away. When the members, under police protection, left the area, about 800 protestors loudly screamed their disapproval.

"We can't get our message out, we are silenced."

~Jeffrey Berry of the Klu Klux Klan

The physical upheaval Saturday was a fair rehash of the political upheaval preceding it. For their own protection, the Klan members asked for the right to wear their distinctive masks during the demonstration. They feared that they would be exposed to hatred and discrimination if their identities were known.

The Klan lost an appeal to the federal court in New York City, which was then upheld by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and finally by Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsberg just as the rally was getting started.

Many count the Court of Appeals' decision a great victory for decency, such as mayor Rudolph Giuliani, though others see it as a legitimate threat to the First Amendment's protection of anonymous speech, even if the speech is unpopular among the majority.

Mayor Giuliani replies that "this is an organization that has a decor of violence and appeals to violence." This was the first time that he had won on a First Amendment issue in court against the Klan.

The mask issue was a critical one for the Klan members, who had come to New York hoping to overturn the laws preventing them from wearing their trademark white hoods in public as well as to promote white pride to other people.

This practice, says Jeffrey L. Berry, imperial wizard for the Church of the American Knights, insists that forcing the members to remove their masks. This exposes them to the hatred of those who object to their message, leaving them vulnerable to possible hate retaliations. In the past, he claims, members lost their jobs when it became known that they were Klan-affiliated.

In the light of the much-protested demonstration, it seems ironic that those who came to protest hate-groups felt entirely justified in responding to their members with even greater hatred than shown by the Klan.

Rev. Falwell and Rev. White hold Christian homosexual conference

by Amy Oglevie
World News Staff Writer

LYNCHBURG, VA - It was once said that God created Adam and Eve; not Adam and Steve. Since the dawn of organized religion, homosexuality and the church have been at odds. The saying, "Love the person, hate the sin" has not always been employed by people who claim to be Christians. Leaders of the church are greatly divided on this matter and needful conference, members of Rev. Fred Phelps' congregation protested, condemning homosexuals and Rev. Falwell for meeting with them.

Phelps, a minister from Topeka, is an avid anti-gay activist and his congregation was reportedly one of the groups that taunted mourners and homosexuals at the funeral of slain gay college student Matthew Shepard earlier this year.

Falwell used to teach the Bible word for word, now he's going off and meeting with these [homosexuals] and going against everything he's ever taught," Phelps said. "He's always said, 'hate the sin, but love the sinner,' but it's impossible to separate the two. Does a judge send the crime or the criminal to jail?"

Rev. Falwell, who has long believed that homosexuality is a sin, insists he has not and will not change his views. However, he has agreed to tone down the anti-gay language, actions and attitudes that gay rights activists say encourages hatred and violence toward homosexuals.

Rev. White, who held a prayer vigil Friday night for 20 homosexuals murdered because of their orientation commented, "This is the first step in our journey towards reconciliation."

"This is the first step in our journey towards reconciliation."

~Rev. White

less suffering continues to occur because of blind hatred and fear.

On October 23, Rev. Jerry Falwell and Rev. Mel White hosted an unprecedented meeting of 200 gay and lesbian Christians joined by 200 Evangelical Christians, brought together for the purpose of stopping hate crimes and discussing alternatives to violence.

The assembly "agreed to 'agree to disagree'" on the subject of whether gays can be called Christians and homosexuality's appropriateness in society. However, outside the seemingly peace-

by Jeremy Smith
World News Editor

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL - On October 24 an Israeli court sentenced a Maryland teen on Sunday to 24 years in prison for his part in the murder and dismemberment of a teen aged friend, finalizing a case that caused tensions between Israel and the United States.

Judge Uri Goren's sentence of Samuel Sheinbein was not a surprise, lawyers for Sheinbein and the Israeli prosecution had arrived at the plea bargain in August. In Israel, judges usually study plea bargains for several weeks before agreeing upon them.

Goren said the 24-year sentence was "meaningful." He ordered Sheinbein to undergo psychiatric treatment while serving in prison.

Sheinbein clubbed 19-year-old Alfred Tello Jr. to death on September 16, 1997, cut up his body with an electric saw and hid the body parts in a nearby garage. After the body was discovered, Sheinbein fled to Israel.

Sheinbein successfully sought refuge there under a law that prevented the extradition of Israeli citizens to foreign courts. Sheinbein's father, Saul, was born in Israel, but he had only passing contact with the country.

Israel's refusal to extradite

Sheinbein outraged American authorities and caused protests from senior officials, including Attorney General Janet Reno. Israel caused some members of Congress, who had otherwise been friendly to Israel, to threaten to cut aid. Maryland authorities said they would not pursue a capital case, but noted that Sheinbein's sentence would be much tougher in his home state than that received in Israel. Sheinbein's sentences will include the time he has already served since being arraigned in 1997, however, he could be free in as little as 14 years with time off for good behavior.

"It's unfair. It couldn't have happened to a better kid."

~Victoria Sheinbein

Sheinbein's mother, Victoria, choking back tears, told reporters: "It's unfair. It couldn't have happened to a better kid."

Goren sentenced Sheinbein, who was 17 at the time of the killing, as an adult.

Aaron Needle, a friend that

Maryland authorities also believe was involved in the murder, killed himself while being held in Maryland.

A court recognized Sheinbein's right to be tried in the U.S. Israel's attorney general appealed the decision all the way to the Supreme Court; when that failed, earlier this year, the state started proceedings against him.

"We respect the American court system and we hope they respect ours," Naor said.

Defense lawyer David Libai, a former Justice Minister, said the sentencing was just.

"The defendant received one of the most harsh sentences ever imposed on a minor convicted of murder in Israel," he said.

Maryland authorities say they will continue to pursue a case against Sheinbein, should he ever leave Israel. They say double jeopardy does not apply to people convicted of crimes overseas.

Israel has since changed its law preventing the extradition of citizens for crimes committed elsewhere.

All the articles written in this section are the works of the writers. The use of the following information does not take from the creativity or quality of the articles. However, the information obtained for the articles comes from the following sites: www.msnbc.com, www.idahopress.com, and www.cnn.com

Stewart dies in plane wreck

by Ryan K. Dooley
World News Staff Writer

SIoux FALLS, SD - U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart and four other people were killed Monday when a private Learjet bound from Florida to Texas crashed in South Dakota after flying out of control for hours.

The chartered, twin-engine Lear 35 may have suddenly lost cabin pressure soon after taking off from Orlando, Fla., for Dallas, government officials said. Air traffic controllers couldn't raise anyone by radio.

Fighter jets were sent after the plane and followed it for much of its flight but were unable to help. The pilots drew close and noticed no structural damage but were unable to see inside the Learjet because its windows were frosted, indicating the temperature inside was well below freezing.

Curtis Strange, who was named Ryder Cup captain earlier Monday and looked forward to working with Stewart, a five-time member of the United States team, was stunned by the loss.

"You never think about these things until it hits close to home," Strange said. "We've lost someone who has been a great ambassador for our game."

The aircraft left Orlando, Fla., about 9:20 a.m. EDT bound for Dallas, and the last communication came when the plane was over Gainesville, Fla., said Tony Molinaro, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Chicago.

"The plane had pretty much nosed straight into the ground," said Mina resident Lesley Braun, who lives about two miles from the site. "There's not a lot of debris spread out a long ways."

She said her husband was among those who saw the plane coming down. "They saw it nose down so they hopped in the vehicle and raced towards where it was going down and were the first ones on the scene," she said. Stewart had been expected in Houston on Tuesday for practice rounds for the Tour Championship, the PGA Tour's final tournament of the year for the top 30 players on its money list.

The PGA Tour said his spot in the tournament will not be filled.

A blue ribbon was tied to the name plate on his parking place at Champions Golf Club in Houston.

Also killed were Stewart's agents, Robert Fraley and Van been in my life," Stewart said after the win. "Where I was with my faith last year and where I am now is leaps and bounds."

The Rev. Jim Henry, retired pastor for First Baptist Church of Orlando who used to minister to the Stewart family, was one of those outside the home.

"He was a wonderful Christian who had Christ in his life and somehow in his death," Henry said. "That brought a great sense of peace to his family in a difficult and tragic time."

His father had played a huge role in his early career and his death in 1985 left the son understandably struggling. Two years later, when he won the Bay Hill Invitational, he donated the entire first place check to an Orlando hospital in his father's memory.

From the beginning, he was one of the only regulars on tour who dressed in plus-fours, calling it his own little contribution to preserving the history of the game. Several times, he even played in white shirt and tie, as they did in the early part of the century.

His closet at his Orlando home was larger than some apartments, with racks and racks of shirts and knickers and one small closet for nothing other than his socks, which were also vintage golf apparel.

Planes that fly above 12,000 feet are normally pressurized, because passengers would have difficulty breathing the thin air above that altitude.

If there is a pressurization problem, those aboard the aircraft could slowly lose consciousness or, if an aircraft broke a door or window seal, perish in seconds from hypoxia, or oxygen deficiency.

Once reaching a cruise altitude, pilots often switch on the autopilot. If they passed out, the plane would cruise until it ran out of fuel.

Payne Stewart can do nothing but laugh after he missed a birdie putt on the 17th hole by inches at the October 1997 Disney/Oldsobile Classic. Stewart, winner of three major golf championships, died today, Monday October 25, 1999, when his LearJet crashed in South Dakota. He was 42.

Ardan, and the two pilots, identified as Michael Kling, 43, and Stephanie Bellegarrigue, 27. The jet was operated by Sunjet Aviation Inc. Fraley, a former quarterback at Alabama, was also the agent for NFL coaches Bill Parcells, Tom Coughlin and Dan Reeves, as well as baseball players Orel Hershiser and Frank Thomas.

He was one of many professional golfers who used time-share flying to make his extraordinary traveling schedule easier the last few seasons.

This is the most significant air death on the PGA Tour since Champagne Tony Lema died in a crash after winning the British Open in 1964.

"I'm proud of the fact that my faith in God is so much stronger and I'm so much more at peace with myself than I've ever

U.S. denies more Russian visas

MOSCOW, RUSSIA - Wary that too many Russian visas are being abused, the United States embassy in Moscow has substantially cut back the amount of visas it issues. The bulk of the Russians being affected are scholars and students, the country's present and future elite. The embassy is concerned that many of these applicants will remain in America in search of a better life, after their visas have expired. The interviewers at the embassy have been basing their decisions on whether or not the applicant is leaving enough behind to ensure his or her return. Many of the Russians being denied are perplexed by the decisions. Some of them like Ruslan Shevdov, are on business-funded short term trips that require them to return, others like Taras Ivchenko, a specialist in Chinese linguistics, are attempting to come through American invitations for the use of their skills.

The embassy is being criticized strongly for restricting Russians from becoming educated and experienced on Western values and principles, a task that the United States has taken on since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

African man educates about HIV

SOWETO, SOUTH AFRICA - Lucky Mazibuko, a writer for The Sowetan newspaper, built up the courage to fight against one of his country's most devastating battles -- the fight against HIV. One out of every four people in Lucky's town is HIV positive. His people, however, are not informed about the nature and causes of the virus. Up to the point when Lucky decided to pick up his pen and aware and educate the populace about the disease, talking about it was a taboo. It was known as the "white man's disease, the gay man's disease or the foreigner's disease." (NYTimes)

Through the use of his own experience and the knowledge he has acquired about A.I.D.S., Lucky has broken down social barriers that have contributed to the rapid spreading of the disease. He was not the first to attempt to break down the barriers in his society, some before him died in their attempts. He simply believes that he's just been "lucky."

Israel part of UN Security Council

UNITED NATIONS - Israel might finally feel accepted as a true member of the United Nations. Though the small Jewish country has been a part of the U.N. from the beginning, it is the only country that has been restricted from serving on the Security Council. There are 15 total Security Council seats, five of them are permanently held by the United States, China, Britain, Russia, and France. The other 10 are temporarily served by nominated countries from regional groupings.

Israel was assigned to the grouping known as -- Western Europe and Others, including countries as far away as Australia and New Zealand. There have been many reasons while Israel had not been allowed to participate in the process, but more recent explanations are the extra competition that a new country would bring to the grouping, and the fear of retaliation from Arab countries that have long advocated the continuance of Israel's current position. Nevertheless, with the exception of several countries, the Western and Others regional grouping has almost fully accepted granting Israel the privileges it has so long been denied.

Legislation encourages mergers

WASHINGTON D.C. - At around 2 o'clock on Friday morning, Senator Christopher J. Dodd of Connecticut, informed Treasury Secretary Lawrence H. Summers, that a deal had finally been hammered out with chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, Phil Gramm. The deal is arguably one of the most important financial reform bills of the century. The agreement between the legislators will repeal the Glass Steagall Act of 1933. The Act was a product of the Great Depression. In order to minimize the possibilities of another financial catastrophe, the government passed regulations that separate bankers, brokers and insurers. The intent was to reduce the probability of a financial crisis undermining the entire economical system.

With the repeal of the Act, Americans might soon be able to manage their bank accounts, stock, and insurance policies, all under one roof. The notion has not been completely non-existent from the system for large financial conglomerates have offered several of the services through loopholes. The new legislation will simply encourage the mergers of financial services and make it perfectly legal.

A Tribute to Michael Bankston

Dear Colleagues:

It is with unspeakable sorrow that we inform you of the passing of Professor Michael Bankston last evening at approximately 6:30. Sue and their children Jennifer, Nathan, and Missy were with him.

As you know, Michael was flown to Mayo Clinic in Minnesota last week in extremely critical condition. For several weeks prior to his passing, the cause of Michael's illness and an explanation for his growing weakness eluded doctors. Doctors at the Mayo Clinic diagnosed the illness as multiple myeloma and amyloidosis.

The Bankston family will be returning to Nampa later today on Northwest Airlines. Plans for the memorial service are underway and will be announced as soon as they have been finalized.

Mrs. Joanne Rittmueller, director of counseling in the Office of Student Development, and a close friend of the family and colleague of Sue Bankston, has been with the family since Wednesday evening.

Let us please join together in prayer for the Bankston family during this time of loss and adjustment. May the God of comfort be their daily companion. May we be the incarnate Jesus Christ as we minister to them.

by Hollie Larson and Sara Keller
Crusader News Guest Writers

"When peace like a river attendeth my way, when sorrows like sea billows roll,
Whatever my lot, thou has taught me to say,
It is well, it is well with my soul!"

"Though Satan should buffet,
Though trials should come,
Let this blest assurance control,
That Christ has regarded my helpless estate,
And hath shed His own blood for my soul."

These lyrics were inscribed upon the heart of our dearly loved friend and professor, Michael Bankston. He inspired countless students to appreciate the power of music and live a life pleasing to our heavenly father.

Michael Bankston was born on October 6, 1955 in Flushing, Michigan. He attended Olivet Nazarene College and received his Master's degree from Boston University. He came to Northwest Nazarene College in 1980 to take leadership of the Concert Band. He married Sue Bankston on August 24, 1991. He loved the outdoors, his family, and investing in people's lives. Michael Bankston died on July 15, 1999.

The Bankston family celebrates with Nathan Bankston at his graduation.

Dr. Jim Willis was looking for a band director in 1980, when he became the chair of the Division of Fine Arts. Willis gave up directing the band, so he began searching for a replacement.

Michael Bankston was in Boston, in the process of auditioning for major orchestras. He wanted to be a professional clarinetist, and came very close to securing a spot in a few major orchestras. However, God led him to NNC. He ended up staying nineteen years. He did get a spot in an orchestra -- he auditioned for the Boise Philharmonic and became the principle clarinetist.

Willis comments, "Michael fell in love with the school and the students. He added a depth to the woodwind sections, and added a great deal of musicianship to the program."

Those who came into contact with Professor Michael Bankston were touched in a special way. His genuinely quiet spirit, love for God and passion for music were witnessed by those who crossed his path. As Spring Fisk recalls, "He helped me appreciate the power of music. He was the first person that I talked to after my parents left my freshman year. After listening to the Boise Philharmonic concert I realized the love and passion he portrayed through the music he played."

Bankston displayed his sensitive heart by never failing to lend a listening ear or offer up a prayer when he sensed the need. As Amy Earlywine remembers, "I was a junior in high school taking lessons from Mr. Bankston. I had my wisdom teeth removed during Christmas break and a clarinet solo festival coming up in February. One time during a lesson I was upset because complications from my surgery were making it hard for me to practice. I was scared that I would not perform well during the festival and Mr. Bankston's reassurance helped me through my fears. As a result of his support and encouragement I was able to play well and received a high score at the festival."

Seth Davick appreciated Bankston's gentle spirit. "Mr. Bankston's gentle spirit really impacted me. No matter what would happen, he always seemed calm and ready to tackle anything that came his way."

Mr. Bankston made an impact on many of his student's, knowing it or not, by simply living his life. He was an amazing Christian example, day in and day out.

Becky Brudnok recalls, "One day last year I was sick and couldn't attend Band. I was surprised to find a message from Mr. Bankston on my voice mail. He had heard that I was sick and was concerned for me. I had never experienced this sensitivity from a professor before."

Mr. Bankston always took time to invest in his student's lives. Amy Earlywine remembers a time Mr. Bankston took time out for her when she hadn't known him for very long. "I was a senior in high school, and I had been accepted into the All-State Orchestra. I had to make a decision between that and a youth group trip, and I was having a hard time deciding between the two. Mr. Bankston knew it was a tough decision, and took time out to pray with me during one of my lessons."

Bankston always made time for his students, and was continually praying for them. He was sensitive to the needs and prayer requests of his students as well. Often in Band he would take time at the beginning of class to address prayer requests and spend time in prayer. Several times you could tell by the look on his face that he was deeply touched and affected by student's prayers.

On Band Tour last year, after a devotional time, he told the band he felt the need to forgo some warm-up time and spend time in prayer. It was unplanned, and could mean costing valuable practice time, but Bankston knew where the group's focus needed to be turned. His sensitivity to God's voice and plans were greatly appreciated.

No one could help but notice the dedication Mr. Bankston had in staying physically fit. Most people on campus knew of Mr. Bankston's decision to run in a marathon. After months of training he was able to run in the 1998 Portland Marathon. Mr. Bankston was proud of his accomplishment, and happily wore his medal and race T-shirt one day to class.

Bankston was a man of discipline, as you can tell by his determination to reach goals in his life. Whether it was practicing his clarinet, helping a student in class, or running a race, Bankston took pride in his actions and always strived to do things to the best of his ability.

Professor Jerry Hull recalls that

The Bankston family enjoys a trip to the Oregon Trail. Bankston loved to plan new trips for his family.

FAMILY MEMORIES

Missy, 17

He was my Daddy and I will always be his little girl. Last winter we took snowboarding lessons together. We had a tradition of seeing every Disney film when it came out; we were going to go see Tarzan together when he got better. He taught me how to ride a bike, and to trust in him. He helped me grow in Jesus. I loved being with him-it didn't matter if we were talking or not. He was my hero and there will never be anyone who can compare to him. I thank him for being there for me through the hard and good times, and for loving me as his own. My mom got really lucky to have had a wonderful guy like my dad; we finally got the dad we deserved. He will always be in my heart.

Nathan, 20

In the eight years that Michael has been my father, I have learned much from him. Through his quiet example, I have learned what it is to be a man of God. He taught me patience. He taught me to try to think through problems and other things with reason. He taught me how to love unconditionally; he loved us all unconditionally. He loved us and was proud of us always, no matter what. He has also taught me what it takes to have a good, solid marriage. My favorite memories are the time we spent together mountain biking, skiing and snowboarding. The last thing we did together was snowboarding up at Bogus Basin. I'm glad God gave Michael to us. I'm proud of my Dad, and I always will be. His fierce love for life was mirrored by his fierce love for Christ. He was a great man of God, a solid father and a strong husband. He will be sorely missed, but rejoice for him because he's home!

Jennifer, 23

Many memories flood in as I think about my Dad. He did many things with us kids, all as a way to show us that he loved us and cared for us. I remember the times he helped me in College Church nursery.

He had a calm way of interacting with the babies that helped them adjust to the nursery, allowing the parents to get the most out of their own church experience. (All of the babies loved his beard). We had made plans to go fishing when he got better. He had talked with George Turner for advice about the best fishing gear, Bankston celebrates his birthday with his new family. The Bankston children have many loving memories of their father who adopted them in 1995.

Bankston and friends pose before a biking trip. Bankston loved recreation and was dedicated to fitness.

"He was in the best physical condition of any faculty member on campus; a 'physical machine.' He was the epitome of discipline and a model and inspiration for me."

Professor Bankston loved life. According to Melissa McClellan, "Mr. Bankston's laugh was contagious. We could always tell where he was in the music building when he laughed!"

Karen Lewis' first memory of Mr. Bankston was his laughter and sense of humor. "During my first clarinet lesson, Mr. Bankston had me lay on the ground with my clarinet case on my stomach—to practice my breathing. I started laughing, then Bankston started laughing. He said, 'Its going

At Christmas, Bankston had a gathering at his house for band students. It was time to get to know him better, and a chance to be in a house before finals. His family hung out with the band and had their special "famous" Christmas drink. The atmosphere was not like anything you could experience during class. Mr. Bankston was eager to become his student's friends and get to know them outside of class. That is something that, being away from home, is a very special thing for a professor to do.

Professor Bankston had a respect for his students, both in playing abilities and as people, and went out of his way to be supportive of them. Melissa McClellan remembers, "Mr. Bankston asked me to play an offertory with him one Sunday at College Church. This was special, because I got to work with him as a colleague, not as a student. It really encouraged me."

Bankston never hesitated to go the extra mile for people. He truly lived Philippians 2:4, which reads: "Each of you should look not only me at all, and didn't have a clue about my ability. He went out of his way to help me, even though he didn't know what to expect in return."

There are many people that were touched by Michael Bankston's selflessness, caring heart, and Christian spirit. Those of us who got the awesome opportunity to get to know Bankston have been touched forever. Spiritually, musically, and physically, he was someone to look up to and model our lives after.

Bankston shares a laugh with a former student. Many students remember how much they loved Bankston's infectious laugh.

Bankston stands proudly before his band to receive applause after a concert. Many band members looked up to Bankston as a leader and example.

to your own interests, but also to the interests of others."

Amy Earlywine said, "When I was trying to schedule lessons with Mr. Bankston, we had trouble coordinating times. I left a message on his machine, expecting to forget lessons this year. He called me back, to my surprise, and found a time I could have lessons. He didn't know

While the loss of such a wonderful person is tragic, we should rejoice in the fact that we got the chance to have Mr. Bankston's godly influence on our campus. His family, students, band members, and colleagues have truly been changed by his life.

fishing place, etc., so that we would be able to have the best time fishing together. He was going to help me shop for a car later in the summer, and we had spent time together looking through the Auto Shopper, discussing what kind of cars would be good for me. My dad was willing to discuss, or at least listen, as we told him about our lives, always showing an interest in what we were interested in. There is not enough time to tell all of the things he did for us and how much he meant to me, but I think I can speak for all of us when I say that I'm jealous of Heaven right now.

This picture of Bankston helping out in the nursery captures his willingness to serve in many different areas.

Sue Michael and I were married on August 24, 1991. In the ceremony he gave each child a gold band signifying his commitment to them, speaking to each one's needs and hopes, then officially adopted them in 1995. He did some amazing stretching and growing, adapting to life with three kids. He was committed to excellence in all that he did. When he committed himself to someone or something, he gave it his all. He was a man of integrity, always choosing to do the right and honorable thing, no matter what the cost or who was watching. Although he was self-disciplined and a hard worker, he made family a priority, leaving us a wealth of special memories and fun times together. Each summer he planned at least one new and exciting family vacation. Even at the very last, our time with him was spent someplace we had never been before.

Although it is just the four of us once again, we're not in the same place as we were eight years ago. Our lives have been forever changed because of Michael's light and strength in our lives. We are emotionally full and whole, where once we were emotionally bankrupt and broken. We now know what it is to be loved, cherished, and valued. We miss him terribly, but I praise the Lord for the gift of that time with him. I know that as he stepped into the Savior's presence he heard, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

"His fierce love for life was mirrored by his fierce love for Christ." ~Nathan Bankston

Censorship: Who should regulate what we see?

by Mindy Oldenkamp
Staff Writer

For anyone who lived in Nampa or the surrounding area during this past summer, you may have heard of the recent hot debate regarding the banning of a few titles from the Nampa Public Library. This issue hasn't been a calm one, and the idea of censorship has become a topic of hot debate once again. Although the issue concerning the Nampa Public Library was with regards to the accessibility of literature to children regarding homosexuality and same-sex parenting, the general subject of censorship is much broader. In one of my recent classes the issue of censorship was brought up as a topic for discussion.

Censorship is an incredibly broad topic, and concerns many aspects of the media and art. Everything from books, movies, art, and music to newspapers and television shows comes under the scrutiny of the censors of networks, producers, and critical eye of the public. Whether something is wholesome or acceptable is supposedly decided before it ever receives air time. And yet, so much of what is viewed, heard, and read comes under such violent analysis, and usually from a small voice of society. There is a voice that demands high control and yet at the same time there is a voice that is just as deafening calling for freedom of speech.

However, the argument can be made that the standards for today's world are much different than they were for the media world of fifty years ago. To see June and Ward Cleaver kiss on an episode of Leave it to Beaver was the extent of a love scene, and now to see two unwed individuals involved in an extensive moment of lustful passion is the norm. What was once a horrible sin to show on a prime-time television program is now a common occurrence, and what at one time would have never been said in the lyrics of a song are now merely branded with a little explicit lyrics stamp in the corner of a CD and sold to any consumer regardless of age. What was at one time not a question of any merit as to what is acceptable and what is not is now a raging issue of hot debate and multiple opinions. Is censorship right? Who gets to decide what is acceptable

I firmly believe that it is, and should be up to the consumer to decide what is offensive, what is "bad"...

and what is not? Is there any power left to the people?

With an issue as touchy and seemingly as black and white as censorship, one would be quick to assume that there is not really any question here as to what should and should not be allowed. However, I don't think that censorship is an issue that can be solved that quickly or easily. For instance, the main problem with censorship in the movies for example, is the inconsistency between ratings. One movie will be rated 'R' for some very minor language in one small scene of an otherwise decent movie, and another movie will also be rated 'R' for containing some rather explicit sexual scenes, language, and violence. How can these two types of movies even begin to compare, and yet they receive the same rating?

It seems to me that if an area of the media is to be censored, than it should be a consistent censoring, or there shouldn't be censoring at all. From a Christian standpoint, I suppose I should say that there needs to be censorship in the media and that entertainment such as movies and t.v. should be carefully screened, but I can't. I can't help but think that the power of censoring should be completely in the hands of the consumer. A Christian knows what he or she is to watch or not watch, what he or she should listen to, and therefore should support the aspects of entertainment that best benefit the attitude of a Christian. I believe this because I find it hard to think that it would ever be possible to maintain a consistent censorship standard. What one person might find objectionable could, for another person, be quite an impacting event. For instance, the classic book The Grapes of Wrath, by John Steinbeck has frequently been banned in many schools for its content, and yet for me, it was one of the books that impacted my life. Who is to say what isn't fit for someone else? How can one person judge what will effect someone else, let alone what impact it will hold on an entire society?

I realize that this is a rather liberal viewpoint to hold. Traditionally, censorship is something that the church has supported, and encouraged. Personally, I don't think that there is anything wrong with promoting what should and should not be shown, listened to, or viewed. However, I think that this entire process becomes twisted when it is done narrow-mindedly and becomes simply a quest of reputations. Certain groups of people want to be seen as supporting one type of cause while another group feels the need to be associated with another idea. And I do agree that there are some things presented in the media that most likely should not be. However, I firmly believe that it is, and should be, up to the consumer to decide what is offensive, what is 'bad', and what should be censored for themselves. Censorship is a private issue, not a widespread one of popular opinion.

As a Christian, the supporting of movies or music or television with questionable content isn't a 'good' thing to do. And yet there seems to be some hush-hush hypocrisy there. How many of you know Christians who do not go to the movie theater because of what the Nazarene church may stand for, and yet that same Christian who didn't go will be at home watching a rented copy of the same, perhaps even 'R' rated, movie. The same applies with music. How many youth group trips have you been on where the popular, secular, radio station is unacceptable, and yet somehow, those songs from years gone by, a.k.a. the "oldies" are somehow acceptable regardless of what those lyrics may say. This is a ridiculous standard of appearance. This is why censorship needs to be a decision made by an individual, deciding for themselves, whether or not the movie they are about to watch or the song they are about to play is going to cause them to stumble, and whether or not they are choosing not to partake of it because of the reality of its content or because of the appearance of it.

Censorship is an issue of real concern, and yet it needs to be one of a more personal nature. You know what is right for you. Christians know what they are to be a part of and what they should stay away from. Take a stand and refuse to be narrow-minded about censorship. Find out why or why not an aspect of the media should be censored. Then make a decision.

What was once a horrible sin to show on prime time television is now a common occurrence.

Staff Infection

I was re-born right here in asile 2...He is dressed like a Parable girl...It was hard to hear her over the loud grumbling of our stomachs, I don't know where it went...I think you should focus on your work right now...I'm not a cowgirl anymore...I know they hate me, but who else do they hate...If a guy even said I was tolerable, I'd be like, oh my goodness, HE LOVES ME!...I smell like a horse...He has a girlfriend...That's good because he's been wanting one...I'm going on a date with myself...You can ask that guy you went to church with... That's my roommate's boyfriend!...I have tow cousins...Wait, now I have three...I just got a third one...This song has the coolest lyrics. It is so sexist...In one of my cheerleading skits...My church has like six thousand people...Except there is a lot of services...I probably have some Italian man's feces floating around in my stomach with the fish...It feels like a leprachaun...Hansel, Gretel and Gristle...She even likes my farmers tan...la la la...it was a good one...Eww, my pantalones...No, you told me that before...that is so dumb...I have a purple one, a pink one, and...Shoes, husbands, whatever...All I have to do is...I forgot about that...I'll do that later and move on to something else...I just act wierd...You mean you dont other places...Is that your final...possibly...

You'd better be good . . . but not too good

Chat with the Chaplain

In his column, Gene will be sharing his insights with Crusader readers. His articles will appear bi-weekly beginning with the last Crusader issue.

by Gene Schandorff
University Chaplain

So, what do you think? Was she good? Oh, sure she was good, maybe too good. "Plastic" is a word that I've heard more than once as people have critiqued the hour we spent last week with Holland and Crystal Lewis. Not that anyone suggested that Holland was plastic. I've heard nothing but praise for the gentle messenger who opened God's word to this community during Spiritual Emphasis Week. It was Crystal. "She just wasn't real."

And I'm wondering, in what way was she not real? Did she not occupy time and space like most "real people" do? Or was she simply not believable?

Perhaps a more relevant question would be, "Where do the members of this community come up with the ability to sit sixty feet away from a person who they have never met for an hour and fifteen minutes and make a determination about their 'authenticity' based on their stage presence?" Surely this must be the gift of discernment.

It seems to me that the only question which anyone in the crowd would be qualified to answer is; "Did you like her?" If you did, great. If you didn't, that's great too. (We might even be able to get you a refund on your tick . . . Oh, never mind.)

Before I go on, and I do plan to go on, let me say that I've had a bunch of folks tell me how both Crystal and Holland ministered to their hearts and how meaningful it was to hear a father and daughter speak "authentically" about their relationship. In the hours that I had the opportunity to speak with Crystal about her family and her faith I sensed the spirit of a genuine fellow traveler.

Last week's experience gives me an opportunity to talk about something that's been under my skin for a long time. The NNU community, both student and employee, can be a very tough crowd. We expect people who stand in front of us and speak, or hold at arms length with the deadly weapon of personal criticism. The tragic result of all this is that we miss the opportunity to learn from some people who might just have something revolutionary or redemptive to say to us.

I'm reminded of the words to a song that only three people on campus have probably ever heard before. It was written in the heyday of the Television Evangelist (You remember, those slick, cheesy guys who used to rant and rave about the love of God at all hours of the night.) One of the verses goes like this, "If you meet a man in a mohair suit, with an alligator Bible to match his boots, You might not like his style too much, but he can reach a soul you could never touch . . ."

So, what's the point? Oh, I guess I've got a couple of points. First, there is no such thing as a gift of discernment which enables you or anyone else to judge the genuineness of a person's heart at sixty feet in sixty minutes. We would resent that kind of judgement being made of us, and we should repent of the tendency to do it to others. Second, we are in danger of being so caught up in matters of style that we completely overlook matters of substance. When this happens it really won't matter whether the people who come to us are real or not. If they are, they'll be the only ones.

There is no such thing as discernment which enables you . . . to judge the genuineness of a person's heart at sixty feet...

sing, or play, to be good. If they aren't good we feel justified to heap all kinds of disrespect on them. But we don't want them to be too good. The words I hear most often which are used to describe these folks are "slick" or "cheesy" (The latter being about as close as you can get to the unpardonable sin around this place)

The result is that we welcome a fairly narrow spectrum of speakers, teachers, musicians and others into our lives in any sort of meaningful way. The rest we

The Crusader Editorial Board

Monica Olson
Editor-In-Chief

Nathan Hydes
Editor-In-Chief

Will Brown
Copy Editor

Robin Day
Sports Editor

Brooke Humphrey
Cover Story

Kara Lyons
Copy Editor

Jenelle Smith
Photo Editor

Jeremy Smith
World News Editor

Kari Wilde
Campus Editor

Kami Watson
Opinions Editor

Signed articles, reviews and letters reflect solely the view of the writer, while staff editorials state the majority view of The Crusader's editorial board. Editorial cartoons reflect the view of the cartoonist and a few influential persons on The Crusader staff.

Views expressed in The Crusader are thus not necessarily those of Northwest Nazarene University or the Church of the Nazarene. We are an open forum for students, alumni, professors, faculty and anyone else associated with Northwest Nazarene University, so feel free to send letters to The Crusader at NNU 623 Holly St. Nampa, ID 83686. Please keep letters to a maximum of 400 words.

Your Turn

Random answers from random people on random issues:

Where would the worst place to take a date be?

Jenni Moseley Sophomore
Port Angeles, WA Elem. Ed.

"The Palace. I don't know how to country dance, and I don't want to learn how to country dance."

Ami Straight Freshman
Grangeville, ID Nursing

"I don't know. I have never been on a date, but I am willing to find out."

John Doe Freshman
Harrisburg, OR Gen. Studies

"I would hate going to a ballet, because people like Travis Strickland like it."

Wesley George Junior
Fernley, Nevada Graphic Arts

"The slaughter house. Who wants to hang out with a bunch of dead cows anyways."

The names won't draw you, maybe the plot will

The Omega Code

Produced by TBN Films

Reviewed by Jardon Jaramillo

Crusader Rating

If you go to The Omega Code to see a powerful, purposeful gospel message, you will be disappointed. If you go to see big name actors, amazing special effects and an intriguing story, you won't find it. But if you're in the mood for a fairly entertaining movie with a quirky plot and a biblical basis, then The Omega Code will meet your expectations.

Produced by TBN Films, makers of the award-winning film China Cry, Omega uses nameless actors and computer-generated backgrounds to keep costs down. Obviously, it doesn't have any of the pyrotechnics or special effects magic of most action films of today, but it uses some inventive cinematography to give scenes the impact they need.

Omega plays off The Bible Code, a recently published book that profiles the work of Israeli mathematician Eliyahu Rips, who believes he has found 'codes' to history embedded in the ancient Biblical texts. In Omega, a media mogul by the name of Stone Alexander comes into possession of the Biblical 'codes' concerning the tribulation and rapture. Believing that this knowledge will allow him to control the flow of history, Alexander embarks on a mission to bring the nations of the world together under one government and one currency.

Alexander uses several people around him to accomplish his tasks, including his talk-show host girlfriend, Cassandra Barache, his personal security guard Dominic and motivational speaker Gillen Lane. Lane, a multiple-doctorate from Columbia University, has, through the loss of his mother and years of liberal education, come to believe that the Biblical codes are true, although the Bible itself is not.

The plot tries to follow the pattern set out in Revelation, including the two witnesses, the apparently fatal head-wound to the Beast, the seven plagues, etc. What it fails to do, is have direction. The story line wanders from event to event without any real purpose, at one point I actually fell asleep. The writers try to rescue the story every few minutes with some cata-clysmic or shocking event, but after about ten such turn-arounds you are completely desensitized.

Dialogue during the movie is a little weak as well, with writers mixing Shakespeare and bad jokes in the same scene. This could be forgiven, but the mediocre acting is at times over-the-top and at other times too melancholy. The movie's extras, which must have been selected straight off the street, do provide some (unintentional) comic relief.

Christian audiences will forgive many of these shortcomings because this movie avoids the using the apocalyptic theme as an excuse for random nudity and violence, as many end-time action films, such as Total Recall and Strange Days, have. The filmmakers maintained high moral standards while writing the script, with only one very vague sexual reference, made between husband and wife, and no foul or blasphemous language.

The movie falls short, however, when it fails to really develop the true theme of Revelation, the redemptive power of Christ. Few references are made to the role of Jesus in end-time events, and there are even fewer examples of actual prayer. Only the final five seconds of the movie reveal the true purpose of the Bible and it's "codes", the redemption of God's children.

The Omega Code had the potential to be a powerful tool for bringing the gospel to secular audiences, but becomes just an entertaining movie with mediocre acting and sometimes interesting, sometimes poor special effects. This movie should have earned four stars for its amazing possibilities and Christian theme, but aimless scripts and vague Christianity earn it two strong stars.

Superstar, predictable but has a few laughs

Superstar

Starring
Molly Shannon

Reviewed by Mindy Oldenkamp

Crusader Rating

Another Saturday night, another movie, another seven dollars down the drain. Or so I thought. Awaiting me at the front of the line in Edwards Cinemas was a not-so-pleasant surprise. Instead of the already outrageous prices that I had finally grown accustomed to, I found myself shelling out fifty cents more than the week before. Yes, Edwards is now a whopping $7.50 for one lousy movie. I couldn't help but think "Let's hear it for the Cineplex!" as I purchased my ticket and vowing to never pay $7.50 for a movie again, unless, well, a really good movie came out.

And as I headed into the theater to find my seat for the show, I couldn't help but think that perhaps since I had paid $7.50 for the show I was about to see, that perhaps I should have seen another movie. I mean, in my mind, Superstar, or officially titled, Mary Katherine Gallagher, Superstar, Dare to Dream, wasn't exactly getting my money's worth. But I tried to head into it with the most open mind as possible.

Superstar is exactly what you might fear. Molly Shannon drags her Catholic school girl Saturday Night Live character from a funny, short, skit into a full length feature film. I couldn't help but think as I watched Will Ferrell, the object of Gallagher's affection, or affliction, for the majority of the film, that perhaps there was a reason that most of the skits that have been turned into feature films flop. Not that the movie didn't make me laugh, and not that it wasn't worth seeing, just perhaps at Karcher, on dollar day.

Surprisingly enough, the movie actually did have something that resembled a plot, as Gallagher spends the entire movie trying to become a superstar by winning her school's talent show. By winning, Gallagher will be able to finally kiss the "man" of her dreams, Sky (Ferrell) and all her dreams will come true. But Gallagher's road to success is full of potholes and roadblocks, most of which are purposely put there by Sky's conceited girlfriend Evian, played by actress Elaine Hendrix. Due to a belief held by the administration of Father Ritley, played by Mark McKinney, Gallagher is deemed 'special' after a fight she has with Evian, and is put in a special ed class. There the plot gets as thick as it possibly can in a SNL movie. Gallagher meets a mysterious man in the back of the class who doesn't utter a word, but seems to have a thing for Gallagher. Slater, actor Harland Williams, is the rumored psycho on campus, and Gallagher is terrified of him.

Between Slater and Evian freaking her out, her Grandma (Glynis Johns) refusing to let her participate in the talent show that will obviously make all her dreams come true, her overzealous, 'best friend' Helen (Emmy Laybourne), and her object of lust, Sky, Gallagher is nearly overwhelmed. And, after watching all of the ridiculous situations throughout the movie, I was too. The movie lacked the high energy present in the skits and at times was just a little bizarre, even for a Saturday Night Live flick. At times, the movie was even rather disturbing, with Ferrell's sixties-free-spirited hippy representing Jesus to Gallagher in the troubling times of her life. Troubling being that she can't get Sky to kiss her, and that her Grandma won't let her be in the talent show.

However, the movie did make me smile and it left me with a few good lines to quote later. And, I will admit that the ending was satisfactory, if not painfully predictable. Though the movie lacked the high energy that would have been present in the original skits, and at times made me look at the person next to me and ask "What?!?!" out of utter confused astonishment, it was a movie that made me laugh, and I suppose that is worth something these days. Just save it for a dollar day excursion.

TM & Copyright © 1999 Paramount Pictures. All Rights Reserved.

Crusader Reviews

Our Rating System

- ✓✓✓ KICKS A HORSE'S PATOOT
- ✓✓ GOOD STUFF
- ✓ DEPENDS ON YOUR TASTE
- ✓ DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME
- ☹ MAY CAUSE BRAIN DAMAGE

Reviews printed in The Crusader's Opinions pages reflect solely the view of the reviewer and are not necessarily the views of anyone including the General Church of the Nazarene or NNU.

All reviewers are PAID for their work. Contact the Opinions editor Kami Watson 8516 at or Nathan Hydes at 8516 if you would like to contribute to these pages.

MY DEGREE GOT ME THE INTERVIEW.
ARMY ROTC GOT ME THE JOB.

Things got pretty competitive for this job. I'm sure my college degree and good grades kept me in the running. But in the end it was the leadership and management experience I got through Army ROTC that won them over. Army ROTC taught me responsibility, self-discipline and leadership. Those are things you just can't learn from a textbook. I don't know where I'd be right now if I hadn't enrolled in Army ROTC, but I do know one thing for sure . . . I wouldn't be here.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

For additional information call Larry Lobdell at 467-8391 or visit our web site at www.nnu.edu/rotc

'Saders get the wins over Western schools

Women's soccer goes 2-1-1 with Western Oregon and Baptist

by Sarah Hughes

Crusader News Staff Writer

The excitement never ends when our Lady Crusaders go to battle on the soccer field below Ford Hall or even when they are on the road. These past two weekends were no exceptions as the ladies in red faced Western Baptist and Western Oregon University for both weekends. They played incredibly well and kept the fans on the edges of their seats.

Two weekends ago on Friday night, the women's soccer team faced a tough opponent in front of a large NNU crowd. The Crusaders battled the Western Baptist Warriors to a bitter end and fell short when the final whistle blew. The game began strong and was an even one at the close of the first half. The second half began right where the first left off and both team were fighting tough. There were a few close goals both ways that had the crowd to their feet but, to our dismay, a Warrior broke free and sneaked a shot past freshman keeper Shemia Fagan.

Then Saturday morning the Crusaders took to the field to do battle once again. This time their opponent was the Wolves from Western Oregon University. The game began strong, stayed strong and ended strong. Both teams fought long and hard, taking the game into double overtime and both teams preventing the other from scoring. The final score was tied at 0-0, giving both teams a tie for their stats.

This past Thursday, October 21, marked a significant day in the lives of all the women soccer players. On that day the trusty NNU vans pulled away from the gym for the last time. They were headed east into Oregon to play their opponents from the previous week.

Friday afternoon brought a day of victory for the ladies as they defeated Western Oregon University 1-0, making up for the unforgettable tie against the Wolves from the past week. The only goal of the game belonged to NNU senior Amy Parsons. In the last intense moments of the second half, Parsons followed up on a loose ball in front of the Wolves' keeper.

After their long awaited victory, the 'Saders packed their bags and headed off towards Salem, to the college on the hill, Western Junior Melanie Hays shows off some fancy footwork during the game against Western Baptist. Hays footwork wasn't enough, as the Crusaders lost the game 2-1 in the final minutes of the game.

Baptist. This game appeared to be a carbon copy of the last with the first half resulting in a tie. The only difference, however, was that when the final seconds of the clock ticked off, both sides had yet to score. NNU, unfortunately, got the short end of the stick once again when the Warriors scored, winning 1-0.

Be not discouraged, all ye faithful fans! The season is not yet over! The women's soccer team prepares to do battle again this weekend against Concordia on Friday and Cascade on Saturday. Make sure you make your way out to the field below Ford to show your support as our own Ladies in red continue their season on their way to the top.

Junior Denise Thuline works to keep the ball away from Western Baptist and earns an elbow in the face as a reward.

Cross country has successful weekend at home

Crusader men's team ranked tenth nationally

by Robin Day

Sports Editor

NNU's cross country teams are leaving everyone else in the dust, which is to be expected, given the amount of time and energy that the team members put into their sport. For first time competitors, both the men's and women's cross country teams are doing remarkably well. In this past weekend's tournament, hosted by NNU, the men's team took first, in a photo team finish, while the women's team again showed their continual improvement.

The field of men runners takes off as a pack during the meet two weeks ago.

The men's team's victory was led by three runners finishing in the top five. Freshman Ryan Jensen finished went to another freshman, Ian Manyfingers. This strong showing gave NNU the points to finish two points ahead of Eastern Oregon and 3 points ahead of Western Oregon.

For the women's team, junior Lisseth Lorelli-Qualls led the NNU runners, finishing eighth with a time of 20:27. Freshman Heather Esposito finished a minute behind Lorelli-Qualls, with a time of 21:08, in thirteenth place.

This is the first year that this campus has had a women's cross country team and the team is dealing with a few of the typical first year struggles. All but one of the girls are freshmen or first time of 26:21. He was closely followed by freshman Aaron Matthias, who ran the 8K in 26:47. Fourth place, with a time of 27 minutes flat, tion being Lorelli-Qualls, who ran for Coach Randy Dalzell when he coached at Cascade College.

The women are having to deal with a flu bug, arch problems and shin splints. One runner is trying to heal from a pulled ligament in her hip. Esposito commented,

"Women's cross country always has the most injuries. Our team is actually doing fairly well as far as keeping healthy. Coach knows the latest techniques for preventing injuries."

Esposito also went on to say, "Every compition we get better. Next year, we are going to be a lot more competative!"

The men's team is breaking all the rules of a first year team and is currently ranked number ten in the nation. If the team can maintain this ranking, they will be guaranteed a spot in the national tournament, which gives a berth to the top 15 nationally ranked teams. NNU can also qualify for nationals by finishing first in the Cascade Conference tournament meet, which is being held November 6 in La Grande, OR. The team has a good chance of taking the championship.

Freshmen Aaran Matthias and Ryan Jensen push for the goal. These two finished third and second respectively at the NNU meet.

Coach Dalzell commented, "I am thrilled with the success that we're having. It's been a great year so far, with a great bunch of kids."

The women's cross country team shows off the result of constant training.

Volleyball Crusaders win two in conference

'Saders defeat OIT & Southern Oregon in four games each

by Lisa Erickson
Crusader News Staff Writer

The Northwest Nazarene University Crusaders were searching for revenge two weekends as they battled with Oregon Institute of Technology and Southern Oregon University in conference volleyball play this weekend. The Crusaders (11-3 in conference) played a do or die weekend of competitive volleyball.

Friday night the Crusaders took on OIT from Kalama Falls, OR. Oregon Institute of Technology the week prior had beaten number one in the conference, Southern Oregon in three games, so the 'Saders knew the match would be a tough one. NNU came out in the first game strong and dominated, winning 15-6.

Sophomore Erin Hellberg hits over and between the hands of an attempted block.

"Sometimes it is intimidating coming into a match when you do not know whether the team you are playing is going to show up and give you a tough match or just come out and play mediocre. We understood the capabilities of this team. They are great defenders, their play is extremely scrappy," said senior defensive specialist Mindy John.

OIT came out with that fire in game two and jumped out to a quick lead. This edge continued throughout the whole game as the Fighting Owls won game two 10-15.

Game three and four provided a different attitude than that of the second. The Crusaders were fired up and was determined not to allow OIT to take another lead in the match. The 'Saders focused on the task at hand and won the final two games 15-4 and 15-6. Offensively, senior Tabitha Shipman topped the kills with 22, while freshman Louise Free had twelve. Sophomores Rachel Roberts and Erin Hellberg contributed nine kills each. Defensively, the Crusaders were lead by seniors Jessica Ackley and Lisa Erickson each having 24 digs. Erickson also provided the 'Saders with 49 assists to finish the match.

Saturday evening, the Crusaders were looking to avenge a 5-game loss at Southern Oregon earlier this season. "We were talking about the game on the court before it started. We promised to revenge the loss and prove we were the better team," said Erickson who led her team with 36 assists, 11 digs and four kills. The proof was given as the NAIA National Runner-ups from last year won 15-12, 15-12, 6-15 and 15-6. Coach Darlene Brasch recalled, "Saturday night I didn't even have to say anything in the pre-game meeting because the team was so pumped up, fired, they wanted revenge. They knew this was it, no more waiting."

Having waited almost a month for revenge, the 'Saders jumped out to a 8-1 lead in the first game. The Raiders came back and battled to 8-7, until NNU's Shipman and Roberts added kills and Michelle Phillips added an ace serve. Errors by two SOU hitters finally finished out game one. Game two was a lot of back and forth play by the two teams each holding leads at different points throughout the game. A Mindy John-ace brought the Crusaders within one point of Southern at 12-11, then Hellberg and Roberts teamed up for a block to tie the game at 12. After a block from Free, Erickson finally put the game away, hammering a set also by Free.

The Crusaders came out flat in game three and lost the game 15-6. In game four, NNU was anything but flat. After the first opening points, the Crusaders trailed 2-1, but that was the last time they would be down the rest of the match. Roberts and Free teamed for a block that tied the game at two, then Phillips served for an ace to put NNU up 3-2. A huge solo stuff block from Hellberg made it 4-2. Fired up, determined and con-

Photos by Jody Yoder

Seniors Erickson and Shipman go up for a block against one of the weekend's opponents. Shipman had 22 kills against OIT and 21 against Southern Oregon, making her deadly to all opponents.

fidant, NNU never looked back finishing off the match 15-6. Ackley had a big match, serving up four aces and adding 18 digs to lead the NNU's defense, Hellberg and John each added 13 digs, and Phillips recorded 11. With 21 kills and five blocks, Shipman lead the offensive effort. Roberts contributed six kills and led the blocking with severi.

NNU's Lady Crusaders next home games are this weekend when they host Western Baptist and Concordia on Thursday and Friday, then Lewis-Clark State College in a match on Saturday.

Crusader men's soccer wins one, drops two

by Raul Flores
Crusader News Staff Writer

On Tuesday, October 19, the 'Saders played ACI, losing 4-1. Fifteen minutes were just enough for ACI to concrete their win. ACI score three goals in 18 minutes, making a bad start for the 'Saders, who were nervous and not very confident. Jeremy Keating was injured and had to leave the field. Coach Pearson had to improvise a new system without the most important player in the defense. Jose Limon replaced Keating in the sweeper position, doing an excellent job.

In the second half NNU played better. The 'Saders worked to create some options to score. Jake Proffit put one in after an explosive shot from Justin Metzger. Five minutes before the end of the game ACI scored one more time after a misunderstanding in the 'Saders' defense.

One aspect that needs to be addressed is the attitude of the fans at ACI. The fans are free to say anything they want, wear anything they feel like it. (things like "I hate NNU," even bad words describing their feelings about NNU). Yet, the fans were so close very to the field, literally there was no room between the outside line and the fans; everytime the ball was played near by, the 'Saders were aggressively yelled at. The referee should have said something about it, but he did not.

Sophomore Aaron Metzger passes the ball way down field against ACI.

This past weekend NNU played away against Concordia and Western Baptist. According to Scott Strobel the team played better than before. "We were so close to win against Concordia" Strobel said.

Keating scored a goal from 40 yards and Limon beat the Western Baptist keeper in a one on one play. "It could have been a lot more; we dominated them," Jon Pereira said.

Concordia beat NNU 3-2 in an intense game. According to Captain Keating, the team played better, yet the extra mile had to be concreted in order to win the game. It was an unfortunate loss against the number one team of the conference. The initiative was always from NNU, they had the hunger to score but fell short in this task. Trevor Stoneberg and Dan Cole scored for the 'Saders.

This weekend will be the Crusaders last chance to qualify for the play-offs. The soccer team showed this weekend they can do better if the lines are adjusted to the game; if the concentration is there, NNU can go up to the next level. NNU has new incomers which had just understood the competitiveness of playing at this level, as was displayed this past weekend.

NNU soccer team needs fan support this weekend, it is essential for them to win now. Their last chance here, the NNU soccer team will do their best to demonstrate they are able to do more, a lot more, than what is expected.

Intramural football teams have tough two weeks

Other Guys now 4-0; Dean named Player of Week

by Craig Craker

Crusader News Staff Writer

The newspaper took a week off but the football season did not. In the first game of the day Third West took on a mighty task of playing the undefeated West Canaan Coyotes. In what would become a holdover for the day, Sanchai Dean ran it in from 20 yards out to give The Other Guys an early lead at 6-0. Early on, Kyle Fletcher, playing for his third team of the season, ran a touchdown in from 15 yards out to tie it up at 6-6.

On the ensuing kickoff James Robinson ran the kick back to the 5-yard line setting up a Rob Russell to Dean 2-yard touchdown giving the Other Guys a 12-6 lead. After a big defensive stop Russell hit Dean from ten yards out to make it 18-6.

The first possession of the second half Dean rumbled up the middle unscathed for the touchdown from 40 yards out to make it 24-6. Russell hit R.J. Strickland for the one-point conversion to make 25-6. In the late minutes with the second string in Jeff Kern caught a 35-yard touchdown catch to cut the lead 25-12, which was the final.

Everyone Else came in against First West (Culver) looking to blow them away. On the first possession Jon Vanderpool intercepted a pass and ran it back 20-yards for a touchdown putting them up 6-0. Jesse Ledbetter followed on the next possession with a 40-yard scramble for a touchdown and ran in the point after to make it 13-0.

Jesse Ledbetter scrambles out of the pocket, looking for an open receiver. Ledbetter's team, Everybody Else lost to First West.

Late in the first half Ryan Ferris hooked up with Jason Grenn on a 9-yard touchdown reception to cut it to 13-6 at the half. Coming out of the half Ledbetter scored another touchdown to give Everyone Else a 19-6 lead. It remained that way until the freshman got things going with 3 minutes remaining. Ferris hooked up with Aaron Hueth from 23-yards out to cut it to 19-12.

After a big defensive stand, Ferris hit Grenn who was streaking down the sideline for a 55-yard touchdown pass to cut the lead to 19-18 with 1:23 left. Everyone Else went 4 and out, and Ferris hit Chad Frosland on an apparent touchdown pass but it was called back on a false start. On the ensuing play Ferris hit Grenn in double coverage for the game-winning touchdown as First West went on to win 24-19. Hueth intercepted the last chance pass to end it.

In the third game the West Canaan Coyotes came out against the Smooth Operataz. The Coyotes were looking for their second consecutive win. On the Operataz first possession they quickly moved the ball down the field before stalling at the twenty. The Coyotes first play from scrimmage Ryan Warwick laid a beautiful pass out to Ryan Brown to put the Coyotes up 6-0.

Sanchai Dean leaves the rest of the field in the dust as he crosses the goal for one of his four touchdowns, to the cheers of his teammates.

On the point after attempt Warwick ran it in on the quarterback sneak to make it 7-0. After the Operataz went three and out, the Coyotes ran a reverse and Dave Oliver rumbled in from 70-yards out to make it 13-0. After another defensive stop, the Coyotes marched down the field and Warwick hooked up with lineman Tom Burruel from 10-yards for his second touchdown of the year to make it 19-0.

Early on in the second half Warwick scrambled for a touchdown to put the Coyotes up 25-0, he also scored the point after to make it 26-0. Late in the game the Smooth Operataz scored a touchdown to make the score look respectable as the Operataz lost 26-8.

In the last game Team 2 forfeited so Team 9 gains the ever so lame victory. The player of the week goes to Sanchai Dean as he scored four touchdowns.

Be sure to come out next week and watch the Other Guys who are 4-0 go up against the Smooth Operataz. Also be sure to catch Everyone Else taking on the 3-1 Coyotes. Be sure to check out Dave Oliver, Rob Russell, Sanchai Dean, Rex Gaoen and Jeremy Franklin as they are all previous players of the week and they provide a lot of game time excitement. It is sure to be a lot of fun.

A look at his way of life

Michaelson shares goals

by Jon McCoy

Crusader News Staff Writer

Coe Michaelson isn't really sure how he became interested in soccer at such an early age. He remembers, though, seeing a soccer ball and just beginning to play with it. He has now been playing for 14 years. He now remains interested in soccer because, "It is more than just a sport, it's a way of life - just look at other countries around the world, how they make it a part of their culture."

Now Michaelson is an 18 year-old freshman starter on the NNU men's varsity soccer team, as a midfielder/forward. Coe played four years of varsity soccer in high school as well as some football and basketball.

Coe initially came to NNU because of the family he has in the area, which for him was a little extra incentive. His dad also coached in the soccer program here at one time. His hobbies include playing guitar and listening to punk music. The guitar is just a way for him to relax, have fun and get away from school work and soccer.

When asked about this year's soccer team, he said that they were young, but better than their record would indicate. They have lost some, but they shouldn't have and have had some injuries, but that they should still be about 11-4 or close to there. "We've had some bad luck, but for the most part, we just haven't been getting the job done. We need to step it up, turn our season around and begin to win a few games."

His future plans hope to include soccer. He is a major in secondary education and would like to coach soccer at the college level and maybe become an athletic director.

Time Out with

Kyla Edelman

Kyla has to be one of the sweetest people on the planet. If you don't believe me, ask anybody, although they will be forced to tell you the same thing. Because it's true. My advice to you is to be at the Science Lecture Hall at 9:00 Wednesday and listen with your heart to what Kyla says to you. You will not regret it. Promise.

You say you want a "Red" revolution...

Shaded Red

by Red Revolution

Reviewed by Scott Carver

"Red Revolution" has to be the perfect name for Shaded Red's latest album. Igniting a revolution, rising from a virtually unknown band, to one of the hottest acts today in Christian music. They seem to have taken America by storm with their style of music.

Believe me, these guys deserve the attention. After the release of their first self-titled album, the worst happened. The van that they were riding in hit a patch of black ice, slid, rolled and ejected three of the four band mates. Unfortunately, the drummer was killed instantly. Two of the others were taken to the hospital, and the bass player was placed in intensive care. The band had just gotten its break and was knocked back down. This shook most of the band so much that they all went their separate ways. It looked like Shaded Red would be no more. But amazingly, after much prayer, thought and discussion by the remaining band mates, Shaded Red reunited and returned to the music scene stronger than ever.

Helping them restart the fire included the addition of new band mates Dave Vallino on bass guitar and Ben Miller on drums. An amazing story to say the least, Shaded Red went through an unbelievable spiritual, emotional and musical transformation. The product produced through all of this came to be named "Red Revolution."

The first cut titled "Revolution" starts the album off strong. This song is a beautiful mix of trumpets. Spanish guitars and driven rock and roll. This song challenges us to go out of our comfort zones and start a revolution for God.

"Hello" is a beautiful song written as an individual's dedication to the Lord. This song's lyrics talk about how no matter what happens to us and where we end up, we must bring every thought and care to Jesus' feet.

Two songs that really jump out on this album are "I wait" and "When God ran." "Wait" is a powerful cut that blends violins, electric guitar and trumpets into a beautiful ballad. The words that flow on this song are very powerful: "Though life does fade away, I still desire you my love, for you my whole life. Though I must go, I can't forget you. So wait, I'll be back for you...I'll come again, and I will rush to your side."

Probably one of the best love songs ever written, "When God ran," states that the only time God ever runs is when he runs into our arms to comfort us. For flat out hard rock, change the track to "About my love," which cranks with heavy guitar riffs and melodic piano. Another rocker is "One Year" which will be sure to move your whole body and well as your spirit. This beautiful song is about how a man realizes he can't live by his own will. Later in the song he devotes his life to following God, no matter what the cost.

"I need peace to wipe away these tears, to revive in me a new joy...only you can bring the healing in me right now...I want to know, I need you now...I know your love for the first time."

To finish off this album, they chose "Tonight." This is a great song to end the record with. The tune is sort of a lullaby, written with touching words that convey the message that without Jesus, life has no meaning. This song has to be one of the most powerful tracks on the album.

Overall, this wonderfully put together album combines, hard rock, spirituality, real life and a sense of overcoming the circumstances. Definitely be prepared to experience a sound that may take a little getting used to. With the driven lyrics, deep emotion and some of the best rock ever recorded. Shaded Red's "Red Revolution" may threaten uproar throughout the whole musical and spiritual communities. Don't expect the Revolution to come to a halt anytime soon.

Winston tastes good and gives you cancer

There is big news in the War on Smoking. The U.S. Justice Department has filed a lawsuit against the cigarette industry, boldly charging that the industry was lying - and KNEW it was lying - when it claimed that it never had sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky.

Whoops! Wrong lie! The Justice Department is charging that for many years, the tobacco industry, on purpose, did not tell people that cigarettes were bad for them. To cite just one blatant example, on numerous documented occasions during the 1950s and 1960s, R.J. Reynolds deliberately failed to run an advertising campaign using the slogan: "Winston Tastes Good, AND Gives You Lung Cancer!"

As a result of this type of clever deception, the Justice Department contends, smokers did not realize that cigarettes were hazardous. This is undoubtedly true of a certain type of smoker; namely, the type of smoker whose brain has been removed with a melon scoop.

Everybody else has known for decades that cigarettes are unhealthy. I have known many smokers, and I have never heard one say: "You know why I stick these unnatural wads of chemically processed tobacco into my mouth, set them on fire and suck hot gases deep into my lungs? Because I sincerely believe it poses no health risk!"

When I first experimented with cigarettes, as a young teenager in the early '60s, I knew they were unhealthy, because my dad, a heavy smoker, warned me of the dangers. "Son," he told me many times, "Hack hack hack haarrwwwGGGHHHHKK(spit)." But I tried cigarettes anyway, because, like all teen-agers, I expected to live a minimum of 50,000 years, and I figured it was no big deal if I knocked a few centuries off the end.

I thought that smoking would make me look older and more attractive to women - that I'd fire up an unfiltered Camel and, boom, I'd sprout muscles and vast quantities of body hair. Unfortunately, this did not happen, although I did manage, through persistence and hard work, to develop a cigarette habit that enabled me to spend the next 15 years smelling like a low-grade dump fire.

Eventually, I realized I had

Dave Barry

Syndicated humor columnist

to kick my habit.

This was before the development of nicotine patches, so I had to devise some other way get my nicotine "fix" while I was quitting. The method I came up with was: cheating. So I continued to smoke cigarettes for several years after I quit. Then I finally got desperate and really did quit, using the "cold turkey" method, which gets its name from the fact that it is no more difficult than inserting a frozen 20-pound Butteball completely into your left nostril.

My point is that, when I smoked, I knew it was unhealthy, and so did every smoker I ever knew. Nevertheless, the Justice Department believes that we smokers were victimized by the tobacco industry, and so, on behalf of the federal government, it has filed a huge lawsuit against the federal government for spending gazillions of taxpayer dollars to support the tobacco industry.

Whoops! Wrong again! In fact, the Justice Department is suing the tobacco industry for $20 billion. Needless to say, the tobacco industry would obtain this money by selling more cigarettes. In fact, the sale of cigarettes is the financial heart and soul of the War On Smoking. Cigarette companies are already selling cigarettes like crazy to pay for the $206 billion anti-tobacco settlement won by the states, which are distributing the money as follows: (1) Legal fees; (2) Money for attorneys; (3) A whole bunch of new programs that have absolutely nothing to do with helping smokers stop smoking; and (4) Payments to law firms.

Of course, not all the anti-tobacco settlement is being spent this way. A lot of it also goes to lawyers. And some money is actually being spent on educational campaigns that nag teen-agers about smoking.

As you would imagine if you have ever nagged a teen-ager, these campaigns are highly effective, provided that we define "effective" as "not effective." In fact, according to a University of Michigan study that I am not making up, the percentage of high-school seniors who smoke cigarettes has actually INCREASED in the past five years. This is heartening news, because it means that as older smokers die off, there will be fresh blood to support the War On Smoking.

The only danger I see looming ahead is that the tobacco industry will get tired of serving as the bag person for the anti-smoking effort and actually quit selling cigarettes.

In that case, the only way to keep the anti-tobacco money flowing in would be for the various governments to join forces with the legal community and sell cigarettes directly to the public out of post offices. This would be similar to the way we've tackled the gambling problem in this country, which is to have the states run massive lottery operations.

It makes perfect sense to me! Of course, I have a turkey up my nose.

Dave Barry is a humor columnist for the Miami Herald. Write to him c/o Tropic Magazine, The Miami Herald, One Herald Plaza, Miami FL 33132.

©1998, The Miami Herald. Distributed by Tribune Media Services, Inc.

Dilbert® by Scott Adams

Dilbert® is the property of United Media Services. Used by permission. The Crusader does not sanction or advocate occupations or working.

Poorly Drawn Man - by David Stillman

Meet Onion Man, NUU's newest superhero

Onion Man can't get a date for TWIRP until he gets a paper cut

News spreads quickly

Later...

you have dates scheduled on the next 72 weekends. How do you do it?

Top Ten Reasons to have your Wedding Reception at Sodexho-Marriott

10. Guests with ID cards get in for free.
9. Convenient for "MRS" degrees.
8. You've already gained the 15 pounds, what's another meal going to do?
7. Marriott always has leftover cakes in the freezer from past school functions.
6. If the mainline doesn't please your taste buds, the Frosted Flakes are grrrrreat.
5. The bride and groom don't have to be nervous about that first dance because it's strictly prohibited anyway.
4. Since you're now bound to a companion, you don't have to worry about eating alone.
3. Patty and other Marriott workers are always promoting service with a smile.
2. The Simpsons
1. Two words: Tater-tot casserole

Submitted at Top Ten Cafe by:
some 4th North gals

This list is proudly sponsored by:
Top Ten Café
Thursdays • 9-12

ShowTimes

Cineplex-Odeon
465-4957

Three to Tango -PG-13- 445 725 950
 Superstar -PG-13- 515 715 915
 Bats -PG-13- 545 715 915
 The Sixth Sense -PG-13- 530 800 1030
 Rugrats -G- 410
 Three Kings -R- 735 1015
 Fight Club -R- 400 700 1000

Linden 3
454-8687

Random Hearts -R- 430 700 940
 Bringing Out the Dead -R- 510 730 945
 The Story of Us -R- 500 710 930

Nampa Frontier Cinemas
467-7469

Inspector Gadget -PG- 700 (230 Fri & Sat)

Karcher Reel Theatre
377-2620

Star Wars -PG- 430 700 930
 Inspector Gadget -PG- 520 715 910

Call for midnight showings and matinees

Contact these cinemas for showtime information:
 The Flicks - 342-4222
 Edwards 21 - 377-1700

The theatres listed above reserve the right to change their showtimes without notice. Times are effective through Thursday.

Announcing the 2000 Essay Contest for
 The Elie Wiesel
 Prize in Ethics
 First prize is $5000!!!

An entry form and detailed guidelines are available at www.eliewieselfoundation.org

The Crusader

Volume 54 - No. 7

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God"

November 9, 1999

The future is only one click away

The Internet is changing the way the world operates. Students who don't want to be left behind should read our guide to the best sites on the web / 8-10

What's inside

T.W.I.R.P: More classy than an orange shirt / 2

Still in the running: Cross country heads to nationals / 13

Column One

I love the fact that I'm cursed. Last week I was in this office until 7:30 a.m. because not only was my disk given away but my entire story was lost three times. Tonight, I had just finished my story and said, "tah-dah!" when I saw a little box saying, "This program has been possessed by Satan and will shut down." I hadn't yet saved my latest work. So now Nathan is working on my pages and I am typing this.

I don't really know what to say. I have never written a Column One. There is a plethora of subjects that I could talk for a very long time about. However, I choose to talk about Air Supply. Air Supply is the best band in the entire world. Ok, nevermind I guess I can't talk for a very long time about some subjects.

Brooke M. Humphrey
Brooke M. Humphrey

Right now we are spying on a mysterious person hanging around outside. The mystery person is throwing rocks at the God building. I just heard the sound of breaking glass. Here comes security. The mystery man is running. Uh-oh, he tripped. Security's got him now. Eric just body slammed him against the clock tower while Jeremy cackled in delight while screaming obscenities and delivering God's swift justice in the criminal's pelvic region with a pointy stick.

Nathan R. Hydes

Nathan R. Hydes

Publication Info

The Crusader is printed at The Press-Tribune in Nampa, Id. and is distributed free on campus every Tuesday during the school year.

The publishing authority of The Crusader is the SGA Publications Board: Brandi Blacklock, Shawn Blenker, Chris Gintz, Jason Grenn, Nathan Hydes, Amber Jerome, Sara Keller, Jeremy Klosterman, Jody Lanham, Monica Olson, Angela Paschal, and Bob Van Allen, and Dr. Gary Waller.

The Crusader
NNU 623 Holly St.
Nampa, Idaho 83686
(208) 467-8656
Fax: (208) 467-8468
crusader@student.nnu.edu

TWIRPing makes for a great weekend

by Lynette Brown

Crusader Campus Writer

This past weekend, NNU experienced an increase in the amount of people wearing orange T-shirts and strange costumes. Will orange become the color for Friday nights on the town? On Saturdays, will you be able to go into the community and see characters like FDR and Eleanor Roosevelt or the cast from Gilligan's Island? More than likely, it will not be a common sight for most weekends, but this weekend was special.

Megan Selby, Amanda Kennedy and Jeff Hall pump gas for Dr. Willis on Friday night for the Polaroid Scavengerhunt that was one of the many fun TWIRP activities.

This last weekend was T.W.I.R.P. (The Woman Is Required to Pay). T.W.I.R.P. is an annual event that is stretched over the course of two evenings.

Friday night kicked off T.W.I.R.P. The plans for Friday included dinner at Noodles, a Polaroid Scavenger Hunt and a coffee house at Clyde's where the band Flowers for Zoe entertained the students. Sophomore Janelle Stark said "I thought it was a great idea to go to an off-campus place for dinner. It was a nice break from Marriott." Junior Carly Powne thought that "The scavenger hunt was fun and a creative way to meet people."

Many people enjoyed Saturday night the most. Saturday's plans consisted of a Mexican Fiesta, ice skating and games at the Brick House. One of the reasons ice skating was so fun was the fact that couples were encouraged to dress up like famous couples. Some of the more popular couples were the Flintstones, Mario and Luigi, Jack and Jill and the Fork and the Spoon. Sophomore Laurissa Hurst said, "Skating was fun. It was fun to see all the costumes." Junior Jenelle Smith agreed that "Saturday was a blast!"

Monica Bradley and Brian Staffenson show off their ice skating skills at Ice World. Ice skating along with games at the Brick House and a mexican fiesta were the activities for TWIRP Saturday night.

For all the people who are not planning to graduate at the end of the year and would enjoy having a fun weekend with a friend or someone you would like to get to know better, make plans to attend T.W.I.R.P. next year. It is a great way to have fun with someone in a group date setting.

Students showing love to teen mothers

by Mindy Oldenkamp

Crusader Campus Staff Writer

For those of you out there looking for an excellent way to invest your time into a worthwhile ministry club, and you happen to be female consider taking a chance on the Ministry to Young Parents.

Sorry guys, but this one is just for the ladies, in an effort to protect and preserve the environment of the young mothers and young mothers to be struggling to survive the incredible change in their young lives.

This ministry club is an excellent way to get involved with a powerful and moving area of life and a wonderful way to offer a listening ear and a helping hand, as well as an understanding heart.

The young mothers are simply looking for acceptance and compassion. They find themselves thrust into a world where things are not easy anymore. Many people do not seem to understand or are not willing to take the time to

Three girls from the Booth Home do crafts with Jaime Boyd, Hollie Larson, and Kristina Scharfenberg. Once a week, a small group of girls from NNU go to the Booth Home, do crafts with some of the girls there, and offer friendship and support.

By being a positive influence in a young mother's life, Ministry to Young Parents hopes to teach the teen mothers that there is hope in life. Though they now have a child (when they are only children themselves), they can still be something in life; they can still succeed. Through simply showing that someone cares, those who are a part of this ministry club offer an incredible ray of hope in a world that often looks dark and condemning.

With meetings once a week, the club strives to become a body of support and gentle friendship for the struggling, yet surviving people who they come into contact with. The importance of a friendly face and a warm smile in an often cold and unforgiving world is of irreplaceable value. And through Ministry to Young Parents, a ray of love and light is shed into that regular darkness and loneliness.

Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.

604 12TH AVE S.

461-4600

NOW HIRING DELIVERY DRIVERS $9-12/HOUR
FLEXIBLE HOURS

DELIVERY HOURS

11 AM-12:30 AM SUNDAY-THURSDAY
11 AM-1:30 AM FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

DORM WARS

PAPA JOHN'S PIZZA WOULD LIKE TO GIVE A PIZZA PARTY TO THE DORM THAT ORDERS THE MOST PIZZA BETWEEN OCTOBER 24-
NOVEMBER 24, 1999.

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

1 LARGE
1-TOPPING PIZZA

FOR ONLY

$5.99

DELIVERED!!!

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

ADD A
CHEESE STICK
$3.49
OR BREAD STICK
$2.49

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

ADD A
2-LITER BOTTLE
$1.99
20 oz.
$.99

Expires 11/24/99. Not valid with any other offer. Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra.

Mangum brings more than cleanliness to NNU

by Mindy Oldenkamp

Crusader Campus Staff Writer

For the past four years, Environmental Services has had working for them perhaps one of the most caring members of their janitorial staff. Bob Mangum is officially the lead custodian for the men's dormitories, but in reality, he is a father figure, a friend, a prayer partner and an essential part of NNU's campus.

As lead custodian, Mangum has many responsibilities and is in charge of the team of male students who clean the dorms. For what is supposed to tally only four hours a day, Mangum is hands-on in the dorms, making sure that the jobs are being done and lending a helping hand. However, as a dedicated worker, he often puts in more hours than just four.

"I'm supposed to 'oversee,' or, 'see as I go,' but I like to help a little more than just that," Mangum stated. Perhaps that is the reason why, for instance, every Monday, Mangum helps his student workers completely rid their dorms of trash by working with them to clear out the hallways and lobbies.

For Mangum, his job here at

Photo by Jenelle Smith

Bob Mangum, a hard working staff member of Environmental Services, is the lead custodian for the men's dormitories. Mangum likes his work, but really enjoys the many chances he has to interact with the students.

NNU hasn't been an easy load. His first assignment upon being hired for Environmental Services was to keep the infamous sometimes feel like a parent, but I suppose I just miss being one," said Mangum. However, the role of parent

Chapman Hall relatively liveable. "That was a challenge. Since it was an older dorm, the guys didn't worry about trashing the place, and keeping it up was quite the job."

But for Mangum, the job is so much more than simply making sure the trash cans are empty and the dorms are liveable. He loves being able to talk to the students and to be a person who they can trust to care about them.

"At my age, I

seems to be an easy one for Mangum to fill. For instance, he'll do simple things like turn on the lights in a dark room full of studying students, or, he'll do things that make a little more impact.

"This is an easy place to be a Christian, and a great place to fall into the role of a father figure," Mangum said with a smile. And perhaps the greatest way that Mangum steps into the role of father is by offering his prayers and support.

"It's nice to be able to stop and pray with someone who you can see is having a down moment, and just show them that somebody out there cares," Mangum added. But beyond a specific moment, Mangum continues to carry on with his devotion not only to his job, but to the welfare of the students around him. "I have an ongoing prayer list in my pocket, and whenever necessary, I add a name to the list."

So the next time you are in the lobby of Culver or any of the other guys' dorms and you see someone a little older than the average student taking the time to improve the surroundings, say hello to Bob Mangum and thank him for the wonderful job he is doing.

For those who wish to participate in Operation Christmas Child, please bring your completed shoe boxes to Student Development by 5:00pm Friday, November 19.

Five Weeks of

- Adventure
- Discovery
- Personal Impact

Cross the Pacific to a land and a people who are quickly emerging as a new global power.

As history rounds the corner into the 21st Century, you can be part of making the future unfold for Chinese young people who are searching for answers to life's toughest questions.

CAMP CHINA!

June 28 to August 8, 2000

P.O. Box 265,
San Dimas,
CA 91773

800-366-ELIC
www.elic.org

For five unforgettable weeks, you'll travel, explore, teach conversational English, play, work, laugh, sweat, talk and cry—sharing every fiber of who you are with your Camp China kids.

You'll change each other's lives face-to-face, heart-to-heart. For a time, for a season, for eternity.

Call 1-800-366-ELIC today!

An unbelievable challenge.

Tonya Reed
Bridgewater College

Two colossal thumbs up!

Chris Cole
Azusa Pacific University

I'll never be the same again!

Aron Gahagan
Hillsdale College

Without a doubt the best thing I've ever done!

Mo Ahmadih
Kennesaw State University

An extended experience in the school setting

by Carrie Goldsmith
Crusader Campus Staff Writer

You may have noticed the absence of senior elementary education majors on campus this year. Or perhaps you remember when the 19 of them stood in front at chapel and explained what they would be doing this year. The new Professional Development School for elementary education majors went into effect just this year.

This one-year internship was initiated as a result of four to five been very successful. Dr. Janet Harman and Dr. Phyllis McMillin visited a school in Olathe, Kansas where this type of internship was in place. The two came back and began talking with people here at NNU and in the public schools to see if the same would be possible here. What eventually made the PDS program possible was a grant from the Albertson fund.

The educators found that this kind of program tends to build better relations between public schools and colleges. They can learn from each other and thereby enhance the profession. There are opportunities for showcase teaching where public school teachers can share an area of expertise with the PDS students. The students are given a much broader view of teaching and can learn from more than one source.

Each of the students is assigned to one school building for the whole year. Greenhurst, Parkridge and all day in the school building, whether they are in a classroom or not. They take all their classes at that school as well as working in their classrooms. By having been in the building longer than a traditional student teacher, the students have been embraced as faculty at each of the schools this year.

This year the seniors had their choice of student teaching or internship, but in the future, only the PDS will be offered. The students who are involved in this program are very excited about it. Sara Hamilton, who is at Parkridge Elementary, said that she is excited because she "get[s] to be in a class with kids for weeks at a time. It is better than just a field experience because you get to work with different grade levels and observe other teachers."

Both Sara Hamilton and Sandra Loughmiller thought that they would be able to be in the classroom more working with students. At this point, the student teachers spend about half of their time in the classroom and the other half being taught themselves. Hamilton said she can't believe she has learned so much already in the short month and a half they have been at the schools. As they go on, the students will years of planning by several people in the education department, as well as educators in the community. They realized that ten weeks of student teaching was not adequate to prepare future educators for work in the classroom.

Daniel Epley, as a part of the new Professional Development School program, works with children at Greenhurst Elementary.

This internship is similar to the medical school concept in which new doctors work under the supervision of experienced doctors. The new program provides students about two times as much time in the classroom as the old student teaching method.

This kind of professional development program has been tried by other schools and has

Chief Joseph in Meridian are the three Professional Development Schools. Each student has two or three classrooms that they work with all year. In this way, they can work with more teachers and more grade levels, so they are able to see a wider spectrum of the teaching scope.

Sandra Loughmiller, who is at Chief Joseph Elementary, says, "A lot of people student teach in a grade other than what they are assigned their first year teaching. Having the opportunity to teach in multiple grades will help us to be more prepared for our first year."

The student teachers spend

Information on semester change

Q. If I don't have an advisor, how do I get one?

A. Check with the Dean of your school or with the Chair of your major department.

Q. Will all of my credits transfer to the semester system?

A. Yes, but remember, they will be converted into semester credits, so the number of credits you will have will be smaller (by 1/3) than that of your quarter credits.

Q. Won't there be less of a variety of classes under the semester system?

A. Not necessarily, this will depend on your major.

As a part of the new Professional Development School for elementary education majors, these 19 NNU students are out in public schools receiving a broader, more extensive view of teaching.

be in their classrooms more, and by the end of the year they will be there full time.

Being a part of campus activities is important to the PDS students. Sandra and Sara are both glad that they are P.A.s and they get involved as much as they can. Sara says that one thing she misses is Marriott (at lunch) because it is such a social part of the day. Sandra says that one thing she misses is chapel. Attending is difficult, but if they want to stay involved, doing so is possible.

This new program will "provide a chance [for the students] to develop their own professionalism," says Dr. Janet Harman. The students are able to share what they learn with the other students and teachers in the building. This kind of student teaching is new and exciting, and so far it is working very well. Because of the Professional Development school, teachers from Northwest Nazarene University will be even more prepared to face the challenges of their own classroom after they graduate and go on with their lives.

Flowers for Zoe

Photo by Monica Bradley

Last Friday, Flowers for Zoe sang several songs to start chapel. Flowers for Zoe sang again at a coffee house in Clyde's. This special concert/coffee house was a part of Friday night's TWIRP events, but was open to all students.

Israel and Palestine peace talks continue amidst threats

by Ryan K. Dooley
World News Staff Writer

NETANYA, ISRAEL - A pipe bomb attack wounded at least 21 people in Israel on Sunday, a day before the start of intensive talks with the government was "determined to smash terrorism." He urged the Palestinian Authority to "act effectively to prevent terrorists from harming the chances of progress in the peace process."

Ramon said delaying commitment to an ambitious timetable for a permanent treaty at a summit in Oslo with U.S. President Bill Clinton last week.

The Palestinians want all of the West Bank and Gaza for a state with Arab East Jerusalem as its capital. Barak has vowed never to give back east Jerusalem and wants to put large Jewish settlement blocs under Israeli sovereignty.

The main Palestinian negotiator at the talks, which will open in the West Bank town of Ramallah, condemned Sunday's explosion and said it would harm the atmosphere.

But the official, Yasser Abed Rabbo, also attacked Barak over settlements, which he said were expanding.

"Expansion of settlements will be the first point on the agenda of the final status talks and without a halt to settlement activities there will be no progress," he stated during the talks.

About 170,000 settlers live in the West Bank and Gaza areas at this time. Last month, Barak struck a deal with the umbrella YESHA council of settlers for them to remove 12 rogue West Bank outposts.

Seven of the 12 have been dismantled and Barak on Sunday said settlers had three days at Israeli diplomat and chief negotiator Oded Eran, right, and Palestinian Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo shake hands before meeting for peace talks in Ramallah, West Bank Monday. The meeting in the Palestinian-ruled town lasted less than two hours but negotiators said afterwards they planned to reconvene on Thursday and hold several sessions each week to try to forge a framework agreement in about 100 days.

Palestinians on a final peace treaty. Police said they suspected Palestinian militants opposed to peace moves carried out the attack in the coastal town of Netanya, north of Tel Aviv.

Israel and the Palestinians united in condemning the bombing and vowed not to let it derail their push for peace.

"We are not going to surrender to those terrorists," Israeli cabinet minister Haim Ramon told Reuters.

Three pipe bombs exploded up next to a rubbish bin on a main street in Netanya and a fourth was made safe, police said. Two people suffered moderate injuries while 19 others received minor injuries in the explosions, said David Sadeh, police commander for Israel's central region.

The military wing of the Islamic movement Hamas threatened Saturday to renew its attacks in Israel.

Police said they had arrested two people, a man and a woman, but declined to give details. Israeli Army Radio said they were residents of Palestinian-ruled territories.

Prime Minister Ehud Barak issued a statement declaring his Monday's negotiations would be a victory for the bombers. But he said it would be "impossible" to reach a peace deal with the Palestinians if extremists succeeded in turning Israeli public opinion against the peace process.

Barak has given himself a deadline of September to conclude a comprehensive peace deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Syria and Leba-

"What they don't remove, in sorrow and pain, the Israeli army will remove the same day or next."

~Yasser Abed Rabbo

non.

Israel and the PLO aim to reach a framework accord on a final deal by February and a formal treaty by September that must resolve the issues at the heart of their conflict.

These issues include the fate of Jerusalem and the future of Jewish settlements built in the West Bank and Gaza Strip on land Israel occupied in the 1967 Middle East War.

Barak and Palestinian President Yasser Arafat renewed a most to get out of the remainder or be evicted by soldiers.

"What they don't remove, in sorrow and pain, the Israeli army will remove the same day or next," Yasser Abed Rabbo told Army Radio.

Radical settlers on Sunday pledged to resist eviction using non-violent means. Hundreds of activists streamed into the Maon Farm outpost near Hebron, pitching tents and gathering boulders to block access in readiness for the army.

World News Briefs

by José Melendez

World News Staff Writer

Miranda rights being questioned

WASHINGTON D.C. - The Supreme Court will decide later this month whether to hear the case of Dickerson vs. United States. In early 1997, Charles Dickerson confessed to his involvement in several bank robberies and was indicted on related charges. Not long after, Dickerson moved to have the confession thrown out based on the fact that he had not been advised of his Miranda rights. A lower court upheld Dickerson's request while the fourth U.S. Circuit Court in Virginia ruled to have the confession as evidence.

Miranda rights are an advisement to a person being taken into custody that they have the right to remain silent, that anything he says will be used against him in court, the right to consult with an attorney and the appointment of one if he is indigent. The foundations for the rights lie in the fifth and sixth Amendments.

If the Court does decide to take the case, they will have to decide whether the original ruling was based on foundational constitutional principles or on "procedural rule."

Teaching aides doing too much

Many schools, especially inner-city schools, have been using federal money to hire teacher aides rather than qualified teachers. A recent study by the Education Department uncovered that 50 percent of Title One federal education funds used for "supplementary instruction and other services was used to hire aides." The reason is not a shortage in teachers, but rather just something they have chosen to do. Aides can in many ways communicate better with students than teachers. They often live in the same neighborhoods, speak the same language, and better understand their culture.

The problem is that in many cases the students are being taught by the aides. Aides reported that about 60 percent of their time was spent teaching students rather than assisting them on materials taught by the teacher. While at times they are the link for the student between the home and school, they do not possess the proper training that teachers do. The educational requirement for aides is a high school level education.

Mary Jean LeTendre, who heads Title One at the Education Department states, "we've got to make sure that the neediest students get the best prepared teachers." She argues that too often, this is not the case.

Protesters call for more freedom

BANDA ACEH, INDONESIA - As if Indonesia's problems with East Timor were not enough, the fourth largest country in the world is now facing protests in another one of its provinces. The protest was the largest yet to be experienced in the country. It took place in the provincial capital of Aceh where as many as 1.5 million marchers, or approximately 40 percent of the province's population, took to the streets demanding "freedom, freedom." People from different classes, professions and ages, flooded the streets of the city including those around the local parliament.

The protesters demanded a referendum on independence. Muhammad Nazar, chairman of the rally's organizing committee, stated, "We call on the Indonesian government to give us a chance for referendum with two options, independence or special autonomy."

The protest is the very thing feared by the Indonesian government after granting East Timor its independence, the domino effect. Indonesian president Abdurrahman Wahid, sympathized with the protesters but called the referendum impractical. Military officials made it clear that Banda Aceh has always been part of independent Indonesia and will remain that way.

All the articles written in this section are the works of the writers. The use of the following information does not take from the creativity or quality of the articles. However, the information obtained for the articles comes from the following sites: www.msnbc.com, www.idahopress.com, and www.cnn.com

Pope John Paul II gives Mass in New Delhi

by Heather Oglevie

World News Staff Writer

Despite political and social upheaval, Pope John Paul II did not back down from promoting missionary efforts in India during his visit to the country November seventh. Although his advent to this country was intended as a gesture of friendship and encouragement to Hindu and Catholic alike, some fear that he is only stirring up a situation that is volatile enough as it stands.

Militant (some would say radical) members of the Hindu faith resent the work of Christian missionaries in India, perceiving them as unwelcome intruders who seek to undermine their religious structure.

Over the past year, religious conflicts between Christians and Hindus have escalated into physical violence, resulting in loss of life and property on both sides. However, thus far it has been mostly the members of the national faith who are being the offenders.

Several bands of Hindus have formed for the sole purpose of defending their people's own souls from the subversion of Christianity, even if this is against the wishes of what the people want for their souls. Naturally, such groups perceive the Pope's injunction to continue missionary work in India as "an abuse of hospitality."

However, most protests were drowned in the overwhelming flow of support for the head of the Catholic church. He celebrated morning Mass to a crowd of 35,000, driving into the 70,000 seat New Delhi stadium in his popemobile to cheers and applause.

"He is the most important person for us."

~Mercia Roach

He was preceded by a parade of Indian girls in red saris performing traditional dances and by Asian bishops and cardinals in their own vehicles. An open truck of about ten protestors chanting slogans and waving a black flag were largely ignored in the high emotions of the atmosphere.

For many believers, seeing their Pope in real life was a deeply emotional experience, even if he walked a touch more slowly than he did during his last visit.

"He is the most important person for us," said Mercia Roach with tears in her eyes.

The crowd had fought hard to get into the stadium, since passes were difficult to come by, being issued solely by the church officials after the good behavior of the applicant had been confirmed through various checks.

In other parts of the country, the faithful of Hinduism, the majority religion, celebrated their own festival of Diwali, which commemorates the victory of their god Rama over the evil demon Ravana.

As these believers lit fireworks and special candles, the Pope remarked, "Many people are celebrating the festival of lights. We rejoice with them."

Although he acknowledged the foreign nature of Christianity, the Pope nonetheless encouraged continued missionary efforts, boldly encouraging his eager followers to spread the love of God into their world.

"Asia is thirsting for the living water that Jesus alone can give," he urged during the Mass—part of an unabashed 29-page Apostolic Exhortation praising the work of former missionaries. He declared the church as an ally

Vajpayee, whose own party grew out of an aggressively Hindu nationalist movement, portrayed India as a nation enjoying religious freedom with only "some intolerant fringes."

It does seem to hold true here, as in most situations, that only a

"Asia is thirsting for the living water that Jesus alone can give."

~Pope John Paul II

to the poor and offered words of hope and encouragement to underground Christian churches who were being persecuted.

The Pope also openly denounced violence in the name of religion as a "travesty of true belief."

The visit itself was accomplished peaceably, albeit with a thick cordon separating the Pope from any possible protest efforts. This reflects the determined efforts of both sides to reduce the tensions between Hindu and Christian in India. Some of this was accomplished by down-playing the situation.

Prime Minister Atal Bihari

minority of a given population will hold an extreme position, though this gives a bad name to the entire community. Of those who do, most say that they demand the end of outside mission work in India, withdrawal of all foreign missionaries and an apology from the church for the alleged massacre of Hindus 400 years ago.

The Pope did not touch on these issues, but continued to lay out his agenda against abortion and other forms of artificial birth control, stating that the church would not lay aside any of its principles in the coming millennium.

Earn your MASTER'S
 D e g r e e
TUITION
-FREE while teaching ENGLISH for two years in ASIA!

Through innovative partnerships with Azusa Pacific University, Wheaton College and Lee University, teachers serving with the English Language Institute/China can earn a prestigious master's degree — TUITION-FREE — during a two-year teaching assignment at a university in Asia! Applicants must first be accepted by ELIC.

Call 1-800-366-ELIC
www.elic.org

The internet phenomenon: Why it is

by Tabitha Chapman
Crusader News Guest Writer

Definitions:

Internet: 1) the program that always tells students that they have performed an illegal operation and the program must shut down. 2) The procrastinator's lifesaver. (NNU Intra-campus Dictionary).

Internet: a large computer network linking smaller computer networks worldwide. (Webster's College Dictionary)

All across the world there are many different fads. Things that come into style, clothes that should never have been in style in the first place, games and movies, just to name a few. Some would say that there is never really any complete unity of fads. As one thing goes into style in one part of the world, the last craze is just beginning to come in in another region of the world.

There is one fad, however, that we can say is happening all over the world. The internet.

So, what's so interesting about this Internet? Oh, only the fact that you can get information on any topic, on any day, at any given moment. Maybe the fact that you can communicate with mom and dad about financial things (i.e. asking them to send you money for that neat bike you saw last week), with a best friend from home (brag about the amount of money you just successfully convinced your parents to send you for a bike), or with businesses (trying to find out if you could find the bike cheaper over the internet so you can pocket that extra cash).

Some people think that they can set up a web-site of their own for all the world to see. At any rate, there seems to be an endless amount of things to do while you are on the Internet.

On the campus here at NNU, every computer lab is equipped with computers that are equipped for Internet use. The staff and faculty have been taking classes and are continually updating themselves to meet the modern world of the cyber generation. For students' convenience, course schedules for most classes are posted on the Internet by the professors. When a student opens up an Internet program, the first thing that he or she is greeted with is the NNU Intranet page, which has links to other NNU related pages. By branching off of it, a student may find anything he or she wants to know about NNU.

The Internet has an abundant amount of information that a student can retrieve if he or she knows how find it. In order to find information, students must do search queries on the Internet. To do this, they must go to a search engine on the Internet and type in a key word related to the information they want to find. For instance, if you wanted to learn all about sea monkeys, it is necessary to put in the words "sea monkey." You would immediately get several sites related to sea monkeys. If, however, you decided to type either the word "sea" or the word "monkey" by themselves...you would get completely wrong information. Try it!

One downfall with search engines, however, is the fact that they only search approximately thirty to forty-five percent of Internet. But just say to yourself, "Without this search engine, I'd be lost" and it seems to make everything much better!

Once you have searched for a good topic, you can use this information pretty freely (unless otherwise stated) for most anything. One thing to be careful about is the validity of the information. Anyone can make a web page about sea monkeys. If using the Internet for a source, it's probably a good idea to find another related page and check the sources against each other.

Of course, this seems to defeat the whole purpose of the Internet: being as sedentary as possible! Another thing to be cautious about is if the "sea monkey KING" on a certain web page asks you to fill out a guest list. Be sure to read the information over, finding out if he truly is the king of the sea monkeys or if he is just lonely and needs to stalk someone for a while. Putting personal information on the net is very risky and highly un-recommended. Most valid Internet companies have a secure server to put personal information. This means that if you put your information on them, they will be harder to tap into for a hacker because it goes from your computer to their server in codes and in scrambled orders. So, unless the Internet tells you that you are entering a secure area, stay away from adding anything personal about yourself.

If you are just dying, however, to tell everyone in the world your personal information, there is a solution! Make a web page! Every NNU student has at least three hours of free-time on their hands every week (yeah, right) and there's always a web-building opportunity for them there. There are several sites to go that let you build a web page for free. If you build a web page using one of the school's programs (i.e. Netscape Composer) you can get it published as a link on the NNU web site. This makes for easier retrieval of your page.

If you are using Netscape composer to access the Internet, it has a wonderful tool bar called "bookmarks." If you run into a web site that you don't want to forget, you can click on the "bookmarks" tool button and click on "add bookmark" and it will paste the shortcut within that bookmark bar. This is very handy when doing research or when making a web page.

Perhaps the most frequent use of the Internet is emailing and chatting. These forms of communication are growing ravenously. The internet is protected under the first amendment. Therefore, you should not be charged to communicate. We've all gotten the email that says that they are debating making us pay 5 cents for every email, but they really can't or else it would violate our first amendment right. Isn't it neat that we are finally old enough so say those kinds of things?

Sending messages to people over the Internet is a fun and easy thing to do, though very time consuming.

When you are chatting or writing an email, the whole computer hard drive and monitor seems to be literally eating all of your time away. So, when you are in the lab or in your room searching the Internet, make sure to keep an eye on the time. Otherwise it will slip right out of your day and be gone forever.

The Internet has so many resources to choose from that it's almost impossible to tap out every use in a limited amount of space. A fun way to discover what the Internet has is to browse it yourself! Hopefully this article will give you a little more sense of what you are doing when you get on the Internet. Computer lab TA's are available all around campus in order to help you with your Internet problems, so don't be afraid to ask for help!

Some useful Internet web sites

For researching:

www.search.yahoo.com

www.excite.com

www.dogpile.com

www.askjeeves.com

For building web sites:

www.geocities.com

For fun things to do:

www.games.yahoo.com

To check email off campus (you must first change security settings on your GroupWise account):
www.ezra.nnu.edu

sweeping NNU and circling the globe

by Kristina Roth

Crusader News Staff Writer

Net-Life at NNU

Words such as "e-mail," and the "Internet" were hardly ever heard several years ago, yet now a day rarely passes that we do not come across them. As kids, we didn't even know what being online meant. Today, kids "surf the net," as personal computers are readily available and 33% of the US households are online.

The Internet is not only changing the way America communicates. It is changing the way NNU interacts within the college and outside its walls, as well. Provided the Internet can be accessed, NNU students have information at their fingertips and a fast and easy method to socialize with others through e-mail.

One of the most popular aspects of the Internet is e-mail. When asked what online users on campus do most while on the Net, the number one answer was, "E-mail." It allows students to talk with friends and family without the cost of a phone bill and can save the time of hand writing, mailing and waiting for letters to arrive.

For many NNU students, e-mail serves as their main source of communication to those who live off the campus or far away. Actually, a lot of communication on campus is done through e-mail, too. Sophomores Amy Fallo and Tabitha Chapman stay up late at night using ICQ to talk to each other, although they could simply step right outside their dorm rooms to see each other in person as they live on the same wing in Morrison Hall. ICQ has become a popular method for talking to friends while at the same time allowing users to do homework or other tasks on the computer.

Some e-mail communication is slower, as users write their messages and then connect to the Internet, waiting for their messages to be sent. Of course these methods are still faster than our good old letter sending method of 'snail mail'. It is estimated that 225 million people worldwide can send and receive e-mail, and all these people are accessible to NNU students.

There are some downfalls to using e-mail to communicate, however. It is pretty common for students to access the Internet to receive their online mail and find tons of e-mails that are of no importance. Junk mail. We probably get as much junk mail today online as we do in our regular mailboxes. People spend a lot of time reading and deleting mail that they never intended to get. Though many of the jokes and stories that come to us via e-mail can be pretty funny, they can be very crude and prejudice too. E-mail can be great for sending information to many people very quickly, but as information is sent, NNU students should consider how many people the information they are sending may reach. Another negative aspect of e-mail is the fact that it isolates us from personal contact with others. It's just not quite the same to see letters on a computer screen as it is to hear the sound of a friend's voice.

The Internet has many more applications for NNU students than merely the use of e-mail.

There is an immense amount of information that can be used for schoolwork and for personal knowledge that is readily available through NNU's Internet navigator, Netscape. Even if students are not sure what site to log on to, they can go to a search menu that will assist in directing them to web sites correlating with their desired topics. Students can find information related to an expansive number of topics ranging from quantum physics, to how to grow greener grass, to belly dancing.

Chat rooms offer students the opportunity to converse with more than one person at a time and also the chance to discuss and learn more about specific topics. Organizations, clubs and even hospitals offer chat rooms. If you have a particular disease or are interested in people who do you can find out a great deal about it by chatting with people from all over the world.

The Internet serves NNU students as an information warehouse with endless rooms of data. If you want information, it is most likely on the Internet. Truthful information is another story, though, and students should be conscious of the fact that just because a web-site looks professional does not mean that it is.

NNU provides students with computer labs in all of the dorms and an additional lab in the Wiley Learning Center, yet there were many students who paid to receive access to the Internet in their rooms this year. When asked why he liked having Internet accessibility in his room, James Bowser stated, "You can roll out of bed and work on your computer all day long in your boxers." NNU students can talk, shop and find info fast without leaving the comfort of their own rooms.

Professors at NNU use the Internet regularly, too. Many teachers place class syllabi, lecture notes, assignments and answers to questions on the Internet. Those who log onto the NNU web page can find facts about events, the students, athletics and the classes offered, just to name a short list of the options offered there about NNU.

Also available on the NNU page are directories that will take you to personal web-sites of faculty and students, a Wesley Center and the chance to listen to any of the sermons given in chapel last year. The Administration much, gaining information online can be difficult and confusing. Many times, friends can help those who are having trouble reaching

Office also offers a list of Internet sites where students can go to learn more about careers and scholarship information. Student callers are able to dial prospective students' numbers on the computer by using the Internet too.

The most common gripes with the Internet given by NNU students have to do with access problems. Students who expect to be able to get online and then can't often get frustrated. It isn't convenient to have to go back to the old method of book research, and the amount of information is limited.

NNU computer lab aids have helped a great deal in solving many of the problems that students come across, but sometimes the problem is with the Internet itself. If a student hasn't used the Internet very a specific site. Perhaps future classes at NNU will focus on how to use the Internet and how to get the most out of all that is available online.

The Internet is just one aspect of the fast paced life we live at college as we near the end of the 20th century. Who knows, some day we may do all of our shopping and business online and never need to go to the library again because all books will be available on the Internet. No matter how much time NNU students spend using the Internet, let us not forget about all of the wonderful people here on the campus. The InterNET is great, but it will never be the same as personally interACTING with others.

Jon Crozier gets information from the internet at the library on a laptop computer. Many students find the internet's vast wealth of information invaluable.

How many hours a week do you spend online?

Students were surveyed around campus so we could see what they thought about the internet. Here are some of their

FAVORITE SITES:

Search Engines:

- www.ask.com
- www.metacrawler.com
- www.yahoo.com

Fun:

- www.bigidea.com (Veggie Tales)
- www.bluemountain.com (cards)
- www.123greetings.com (cards)

Special Interest:

- www.nbc.com/snl
- www.rodeoroughstock.com
- www.sfgiants.com
- www.travelocity.com
- www.mtv.com
- www.realmofredheads.com

Shopping:

- www.gap.com (clothes)
- www.amazon.com (books)
- www.bibliofind.com (books)

Finance:

- www.etrade.com
- www.cnn.fn.com

We also wanted to know what NNU students thought of the internet. Here are some of their responses:

What is the coolest thing you've ever done/seen on the internet?

"I took a virtual tour of the college I was going to spend a semester at in England."

-Melissa

"I just bought a plane ticket."

-Jennifer

"Visited museums."

-Anna

"Viewing cameras from my home."

-Daniel

"Printed off Veggie Tale coloring pages."

-Apryl

What about the internet have you found most useful?

"ICQ and e-mail."

-Armarna

"When I was at a loss for where to look for information for papers and found a heap of useful articles on line."

-Lynette

"Search engines--the fact that it is so easy to find information on almost anything."

-Laurissa

What is your attitude about the internet?

"Good grief, I love it! It is better than a library in terms of educational value, better for entertainment than Disneyland (don't know about Disneyworld, never been there). I've liked it since it first started on it. Oh sure, there are bad spots, just like in life, but it is your choice as to whether you stay there."

-Sarah

"It is fun and useful, but it isn't necessary."

-Nathan

"It is a good source of information but it has a lot of sources that aren't credible."

-Lori

"I think it is an awesome asset to technology. I don't use the internet very often but it is so nice to know that I have the option to use it anytime and that I will be able to find the information that I need."

-Jennifer

What do you dislike about the internet?

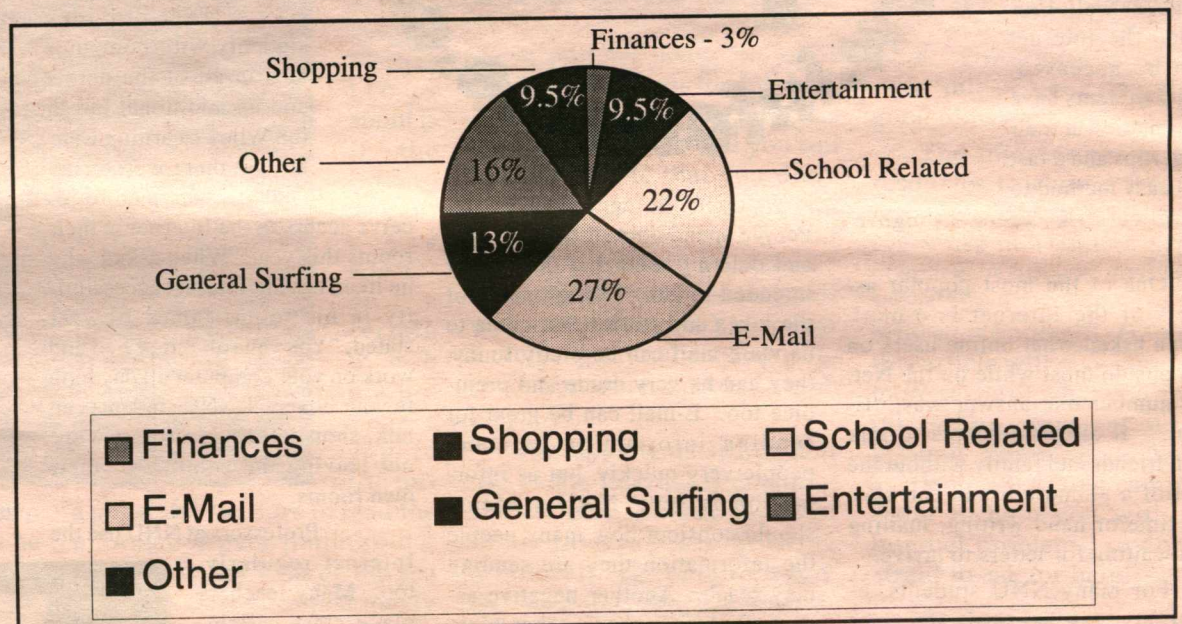

"Inappropriate sights that trick people into going into them."

-Amy

"That you search for one thing and it comes up with twenty unrelated things that you didn't want."

-Tracy

For what do you typically use the internet?

Your Turn

Random answers from random people on random issues:

If you could think of the perfect website, what would it include?

Sara Braker Randolph, WI Sophomore Gen. Studies

"Chad of course, we always do homework on the internet. I go on Spanish chat and have wonderful conversations with him. I don't always understand conversations them, but oh well."

Brad Herbert Freshman Salem, OR Graphic Design

"Women. All about women. How to understand women. What am I doing wrong?"

Jon Pereira Sophomore Buhl, ID Physical Therapy

"The Man Show and girls on trampolines."

Scott Strobel Junior Moscow, ID General Studies

"Sports Fanatic Headquarters--dancing and bowling shoes."

MY DEGREE GOT ME THE INTERVIEW. ARMY ROTC GOT ME THE JOB.

Things got pretty competitive for this job. I'm sure my college degree and good grades kept me in the running. But in the end it was the leadership and management experience I got through Army ROTC that won them over. Army ROTC taught me responsibility, self-discipline and leadership. Those are things you just can't learn from a textbook. I don't know where I'd be right now if I hadn't enrolled in Army ROTC, but I do know one thing for sure . . . I wouldn't be here.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

For additional information call
Larry Lobdell at 467-8391 or visit our web site at www.nnu.edu/rotc

Seniors say goodbye after successful season

by Lisa Erickson

Crusader News Staff Writer

It was a revenge night, the seniors' last night to play at home. The Crusaders of Northwest Nazarene beat their cross-town rivals from Albertson in three games straight. The Crusaders were determined to avenge a 15-3, 15-12, 9-15, 15-11 loss to Albertson on Sept. 21, and they swept the 'Yotes 15-13, 15-10, 15-9 in a Cascade Conference match Friday night on an evening we had lost to them before. So their desire was to win this match and they played like that," said NNU coach Darlene Brasch.

NNU's excitement came through early on in game one as the Crusaders rolled to leads of 9-2 and 13-6 before the 'Yotes regrouped. The 'Yotes pushed their way back due to a couple of great kills and a few NNU hitting errors. Then a long tip out of bounds by Shipman tied it for Albertson at 13. But Shipman answered for the Crusaders, pound-

Another Shipman ace, one of four for the night, made it 14-9, and it was Shipman's turn again as the senior pounded out one of her 12 kills to end the game. "I think that has been the whole season," Ackley said about NNU's senior contributions at key times. "But it's lots of fun. This was our last hurrah and we always like to beat Albertson anyway," she added.

In game three, Albertson fell behind as NNU inched out to a 5-1 edge. But the 'Yotes pushed back, gaining leads of 8-7 and 9-8 before NNU's Ackley provided more of that senior firepower. "It stayed on 9-8 for a long time and I was sick of it, so I decided I'd go in there and try acing some balls," Ackley, who had five aces and a six point run, said "It was fun. It's kinda sad, but it's exciting," Ackley added about playing her final home match for NNU. "It's a good one to win and a good one to end on." The Crusaders seniors had an amazing night and a wonderful season.

Shipman was an All-Conference and All-Region (2nd team) selection last year as a junior in the position of middle blocker. Shipman was named to two all tournament teams this season, player of the week for the Cascade Conference three times, and national player of the week once. Shipman led the conference in blocking, racking up almost two full blocks per game. She also now holds the records for most blocks in a match, season and career. Offensively, she was the main fire power for the Crusaders this year, with a team high of 414 kills.

Erickson, NNU's senior setter, was also an All-Conference and All-Region (2nd team) selection for the Crusaders last year. Erickson was named to three all tournament teams this season, conference setter of the week twice, and national setter of the week once. She was also named to the All-Tournament National Team in the 1998 season. Erickson now holds the records for most assists in a season and career. She also holds the record for most assists in a season and career. She is second in most assists per game and tied for third in most aces in a match. Many comment on how much fun it is to watch this setter run the Crusader offense on the court.

Ackley, a four year letter winner at NNU, is one of the best defensive players on the Lady Crusaders volleyball team. Her amazing leadership on the court is an asset to the team. Ackley was a close second in the conference in digs, averaging 3.8 per game. She definitely is fired up when she steps on to the court. Her energy is contagious.

John came to NNU from Walla Walla last year as a junior. She has played the last two seasons at left back and is an important part of the NNU defense. Third behind Ackley for digs in the conference, John is another outstanding defensive player. She is a great example of a dedi-

Seniors Lisa Erickson and Tabitha Shipman team up for a block in their last home game.

Seniors and their families say goodbye to the fans and Coach Brasch. left to right, Mindy John, Jessica Ackley, Tabitha Shipman and Lisa Erickson.

when NNU said goodbye to its four seniors, Tabitha Shipman, Lisa Erickson, Jessica Ackley and Mindy John.

NNU (24-6 overall, 13-3 conference) jumped on the 'Yotes in both games one and two, then closed out all three games with some senior firepower. "They were pretty excited before the match, and not just because it was senior night and the last match, but because it was Albertson and ing a kill for a sideout, then serving up an ace to reestablish NNU. After four sideouts, Free picked off an overpass for NNU and finished the game.

Once again, in game two, NNU jumped to a 9-2 edge before the Yotes rallied. A pair of NNU miscues and an Anna Slade kill made it 9-5, and a tandem block by two Albertson players made it 13-9 late before the Crusaders senior leadership showed up again.

Intramural regular season ends; playoffs begin

by Craig Craker

Crusader News Staff Writer

This last Saturday, the intramural season came to a crashing end, as six teams looked to move on. In the first game, the Carnies, who were already eliminated from playoff contention, looked to ruin some playoff hopes against Team 12.

John Vanderpool and company had other ideas. Vanderpool opened the game up with a touchdown to put Everyone Else up 6-0. Late in the first half, the Carnies scored as Ruben Garcia caught a 25-yard touchdown to tie the game at six apiece. Rex Gaoen the fabulous freshman continued his phenomenal season by running in the extra point to put the Carnies up 7-6 going into the half. However, on the first play in the second half Jesse Ledbetter ended all hopes of an upset as he scrambled in from 15 yards with the game clinching touchdown at 12-7. Everyone Else plays on Saturday morning in the opening round of the playoffs.

In the second game, the Smooth Operataz' went up against Team 13 in a tune-up for the playoffs, but the only tuning the Operataz' did was walking back to receive kick-off after kick-off. On the opening kick-off, Dan Polish ran it back 70-yards for the touchdown to make it 6-0. After what would be one of many three and outs for the Operataz', Jeremy Franklin took a handoff up the middle for sixty yards, setting up Curt Pentacost's one yard touchdown catch to make it 12-0. Later Polish caught a 40-yard touchdown catch and Pentacost followed it with a two-point conversion to make it 20-0 at the half.

Early in the second half Jimmy Bennum intercepted a pass and ran it back 60 yards to make it 26-0. Franklin added a 20-yard touchdown run, followed by another two-point conversion by Pentacost to make it 34-0. Finishing off the scoring was Polish with an untouched twenty yard touchdown catch, making it 40-0. Team 13 will open the playoffs on Saturday morning.

In the third game of the day, Team 11 beat Team 2 by forfeit as they get ready for their playoff game on Saturday. In the final game of the day, Team 9, one of two undefeated teams, took on Team 14. This was the Josh Hodges show. Hodges scored three touchdowns, two from 80 yards and one from 30, and Johnny Hampton and Jaden Perry followed with two-point conversions to make it 22-0 at half.

Early in the second half, John Galloway scored from five yards out, followed by a Chad Frosland cated individual who works to accomplish her goals. Her leadership on the court is not displayed only by her words, but also by her example.

Next weekend the Crusaders head off to their conference tournament in Portland at Concordia University. The Sadlers play the winner of the first round match between Southern Oregon University and Oregon Institute of Technology in the double elimination conference tournament. Remember to wish them luck this weekend and listen for information about the games. Thanks once again for being such great fans and providing all your support for the Lady Crusader women's volleyball team.

extra point to cut it to 22-7. But Team 11's defense clamped down and that was the final score. Team 9 has a bye in the first round but will start its playoff run on Saturday morning.

Teams 3, 4, 6, 9, 11, 12, and 13 have made the playoffs. The playoffs begin at 9 am and it has not been decided whether or not the Championship Game will be on Saturday the 13th or the 20th. Stay tuned for further details.

After much debate the votes are in and the winner of the 1999 Intramural Football MVP has been announced. Sanchai Dean picks up the MVP in his final season. Tied for second were Josh Hodges and Rex Gaoen.

Men's cross country qualifies for Nationals

by Aaron Capen

Crusader News Staff Writer

With the addition of a cross country team to our campus' athletic agenda, many questions have been posed, such as: "what is cross-country?", "is our NNU team any good?" and "how exactly does a competition work?"

In an attempt to answer these questions and more, let's first take a look at how the men's and women's teams did this weekend at the Conference Meet in LaGrande, OR. Despite an injury- and illness-plagued season, the women finished their season fifth in the conference with an outstanding showing on Saturday. Heather Esposito placed second in the meet, Lisseth Lorelli-Qualls (12th), Mindy Meier (21st) and Erica Madison (32nd) led the women to their best team performance this year. Only two points from fourth place as a team, the girls ran against three other ranked teams.

The men's team took second overall, with the help of some outstanding performances by Ryan Jensen (2nd), Aaron Matthias (3rd),

Ian Manyfingers (9th) and Shane Marshall (17th), who also stepped it up this week and ran his best race of the season. Concerning the race, Ryan Jensen states, "This race is not indicative of who we are as a team and what we've accomplished." Freshman standout, Aaron Matthias, reaffirms by stating, "We didn't run to our fullest potential, but we did run our hearts out."

Although it was not their best race of the year, the men's team did just enough to qualify for Nationals in Konosha, Wisconsin in two weeks. The coach of the cross-country team, Randy Dalzell, stated, "I'm thrilled we are going to Nationals in our first year. Everyone has worked really hard, and it's a great reward for them to get this experience."

So, NNU does have a cross-country team, and they are good. These fellow students usually run between 45 and 60 miles per week. That's more than most of us drive, or even ride for that matter. And, unlike Forrest Gump, they don't just run a steady pace everywhere they go. There are speed workouts, pool workouts, circuit training and, my personal favorite, long-distance workouts. Many of the runners stand out around campus because of the sore muscles, shin splints, muscle pulls and decimated feet that cause them to limp or walk a little awkward.

One of the most difficult sacrifices that one must give up to run long distance is the Double Quarter-Pounder with cheese, the McDonald's fries, the beautiful concoction you get from carbonating sugar and water and anything else that tastes good.

Yes, a runner's diet consists of grains, fruits and vegetables.

Yumm. But these determined-yet-slightly-crazed-individuals give it all up for one reason: running. I can't explain their priorities. All I can say is I'm included as one of the victims to this strange phenomenon.

Matt Sanders, Senior and member of the cross-country team, said it best, "Running is not fun, it's the satisfaction you get from running that makes it worthwhile."

I'd like to finish this article by telling you, the reader, the aspect of this team that sets them apart from all others I've been a part of or, for that matter, witnessed. Not only is each person on the team a tremendous athlete, but each actively seeks God. This is evident in the way they live their lives. These are some of the friendliest, most encouraging people I have ever

Photo by Rachelle Robnette

Freshman Aaron Matthias ran his heart out and finished third at the conference meet. He helped to lead the team to second overall.

Freshman Erica Madison pushes towards the finish line at the conference meet. She finished 32nd in the 5K.

Lisseth Lorelli-Qualls

by Jon McCoy

Crusader News Staff Writer

This year saw the emergence of a new team at NNU; the women's cross country team. The new team has brought in new coaches and new students who are dedicated to the sport and who might not otherwise be here in our community. One such student is Lisseth Lorelli-Qualls.

Lorelli-Qualls transferred to NNU as a junior from Cascade College in Portland, Oregon. Born in Matagalpa, Nicaragua, she moved to Portland for her junior year of high school. Qualls played volleyball in Nicaragua and initially had planned to play in Portland, but because of the language barrier, she didn't make the team. So Lorelli-Qualls tried out for cross-country.

Lorelli-Qualls could not speak any English when she moved to the United States, and the language barrier caused her frustrations in school and cross-country. During races, Qualls and her coach used hand signals when she reached her last lap.

Because she could not understand directions, she followed her teammates or other runners. One time, she lost sight of the runners she was following and ended up getting lost. It took 30 minutes just to find her way back to her high school.

So far, nothing like that has happened to Lorelli-Qualls at NNU. She likes the school atmosphere here more than that of Cascade College. There are more academic opportunities and more team support than there has been in past teams she has run for.

Lorelli-Qualls says that she runs with a great group of girls and that they have a good relationship with each other. School support is also one thing that she sees as an asset to this school. "Cross-country meets aren't the most exciting events to watch, but Saturday at regionals, when I saw how many students from NNU drove, I was inspired to run better. School support helps you do a better job representing your school, your team and yourself."

As far as the school itself, students are more friendly and "you can see Christ in the students and professors." This was one reason for her transfer to NNU. Lisseth was frustrated with the team at Cascade and there was no real Christian atmosphere around the school, so she decided to follow her coach, Randy Dalzell, to NNU. While here, Qualls will study International Business and run for the women's track team this spring.

Time Out with Dustin Herring

You have seen Dustin in such roles as SGA personnel, Homecoming Nominee and a Backdoor-Boy, but you don't really know him unless you've seen him as a man with a heart for the Lord. Go to the Science Lecture Hall at 9:00 Wednesday to hear what Dustin has to say and then go to Clydes afterwards for Time In, hosted by the sassy, redhead social vice-president.

Keeping integrity while walkin' in the dark

Out of my mind

In his column, Gene will be sharing his insights with Crusader readers. His articles will appear bi-weekly beginning with the last Crusader issue.

by Gene Schandorff
University Chaplain

Sometimes integrity slips by so fast that we miss it. Or perhaps it's been so long since the last time we saw it that we don't even recognize it. Or maybe we're so caught up in holding up our own facades that we don't even know it's around. Integrity made a couple of surprise visits to our community in the past couple of weeks. You might have been there for one, or even for both.

The first was on Thursday morning during Spiritual Emphasis Week. I think it was pastor Holland Lewis' most significant message. Holland spoke of a dark time in his spiritual journey, a time of real doubt, a time of real struggle. He spoke of moving from a place where he knew it all, and believed even more to a place where he knew nothing and believed even less. This time took place while he was a student at a Nazarene College.

Integrity's second stop by our campus came last week at Time-Out. One of our own students dared to talk to us about his own journey from faith, through doubt, to . . . Well, come to think of it, there wasn't a real neat conclusion to the story of his journey. In some sense that made his selfdisclosure all the more remarkable.

There's one significant difference in these two stories. One was retrospective, the other was contemporary. One looked back on a battle won, the other reported from the front lines on a battle in progress. Both reminded me that I've fought, and in some sense am still fighting, the very same fight.

For me, answers have always come easier than faith. I grew up knowing that "read your Bible, pray and go to church" was the answer to almost every significant question in life. At the end of the 20th century, this formula has been replaced by the almost equally inadequate mantra, "What would Jesus Do?" At some point in my college journey it all came crashing down.

Now, the purpose of this piece is not to whine about loss of faith. Nor, for that matter, is it to commend others for their courage and integrity. It is to reflect for a moment on the one striking similarity in all three of these stories, PEOPLE. For, Holland and I, it was the faithful presence of a few good people that helped us, and I suspect is still helping us move from faith through doubt and back to faith. The student talked about having three people in his life who were hanging in there with him along the way.

We talk a lot around here about what to do when your friend starts drinking. But we don't talk at all about what to do when you or your friend start doubting. My fear is that we often treat both behaviors the same. Hear this. THEY ARE NOT THE SAME. Doubt is not a sin. There is nothing Christian about a community which refuses to embrace its members in the midst of their doubts.

Here's a news flash. NNU has no institutional prohibition against doubt.

I'm thinking about Jesus in the upper room. Much of the time I have no idea what Jesus would do, but I'm usually pretty clear on what he has done. Jesus was about to give his disciples more reason to doubt than we will ever encounter in any college. He was about to die. As Jesus prepared his disciples to face days of their darkest day he did not warn them about faith. He did not tell them to stay away from liberals. He did not remind them of the miracle of his birth, or of the inspiration of His words. He simply told them to love each other. It seems that He knew that the best chance his disciples had of finding their way back into the light was by holding each others hands while they were walkin' in the dark.

Staff Infection

You know what, I don't really have shoulder hair, I was just kidding . . . What do you think about girls with hairy shoulders? . . . I love being in the office on Monday nights . . . It's a favorite past-time of mine . . . It's better than Monday night football . . . Kara's not here, so you can observe my athletic body . . . Come on Bob, let's dance! . . . You're in a wheelchair for the rest of your life. Thanks Bob . . . He is a positively indecent cretan... You have to cuss at him then he will know you don't want to talk...I just like to write Schandorff, I mean if he had a name like Smith he'd never make it in Poorly Drawn Man.

The Crusader Editorial Board

Monica Olson
Editor-In-Chief

Nathan Hydes
Editor-In-Chief

Will Brown
Copy Editor

Robin Day
Sports Editor

Brooke Humphrey
Cover Editor

Kara Lyons
Copy Editor

Jenelle Smith
Photo Editor

Jeremy Smith
World News Editor

Kari Wilde
Campus Editor

Kami Watson
Opinions Editor

Signed articles, reviews and letters reflect solely the view of the writer, while staff editorials state the majority view of The Crusader's editorial board. Editorial cartoons reflect the view of the cartoonist and a few influential persons on The Crusader staff.

Views expressed in The Crusader are thus not necessarily those of Northwest Nazarene University or the Church of the Nazarene. We are an open forum for students, alumni, professors, faculty and anyone else associated with Northwest Nazarene University, so feel free to send letters to The Crusader at NNU 623 Holly St. Nampa, ID 83686. Please keep letters to a maximum of 400 words.

Letter to Editor

Young people don't want to see death and murder as a part of life. Often times this is the life that has been handed to them and they make due. They survive. Your reaction to juvenile crime saddens me. Your ideas are on the rise though, and I commend you for jumping on the bandwagon. You failed to mention the injustice these young "criminals" go through to make them who they are.

I will most likely not defend the crime of an eighteen year-old because of what he went through when he was three because I do believe that juveniles are responsible for a majority of their actions. But I think it is necessary to look at the pasts of these kids to fully understand the values and morals that they have grown up to believe as truth. The society that now condemns them is the same society which made them.

The answer to these crimes is not to lock these individuals up but to teach them to believe in a different set of rules and reshape the thinking process which allowed them to commit these crimes. Why do children commit crimes? The majority of juvenile crime is not done because they enjoy screwing up. Neither is it done because kids like to hurt people.

They commit these crimes because they lack trust, love and the ability to fit into the ideal we have for them. People cannot survive on their own; they need help.

Crime is a way for these kids to get noticed and to find the attention that they yearn for. I don't understand the need for toughness when you're dealing with children. Being tough should be one of the last things on your mind. Is the society and culture we live in not tough enough?

I have faith that these children can be changed. Locking them up with the real murderers, junkies, rapists and thieves just reinforces the idea that society has given up on them. The majority of these little punks have taken a few wrong turns here and there and there isn't much that separates them from you or me. The growing trend is not rehabilitation. It is incarceration, and that is very sad. Reform should be our only mindset. Signed--Kevin Padden nd Average movie, misplaced theater

The Bachelor
 Starring Chris O'Donnell and Renee Zellweger Reviewed by Gina Meis

nausea.

The above warning was not negative, just honest. With a summer full of wedding movies, i.e. Runway Bride, I think I could hum the wedding march in my sleep. Considering this fact, the bachelor already has a strike against it. Same old wedding story, one boy, one girl, good romance, lack of guts to take the plunge. With the same old story and the surplus of wedding movies one would ask why. Why should I see this movie? I know the ending.

There are a few good reasons for both sexes, however. Ladies, can you say Chris O'Donnell? How about Chris O'Donnell in a tux for a good portion of the movie? Oh yes, it is a beautiful thing.

Gentlemen, you will not be disappointed either. Renee Zellweger looks the best I have ever seen her. If Renee is not good enough, you could enjoy Maria Carey or Brooke Shields, who both do great cameos for the movie.

Yes, the casting was one of the best aspects of this movie. Some of the best characters were played in the supporting roles as the sister, the priest and the best friend. Put simply, this movie has great casting with good character development.

Although the plot seems somewhat obvious the movie is spiced up with great cuts and shots. The beginning sets up a great analogy throughout the film that I thoroughly enjoyed. This analogy is followed through with clever twists and visuals.

The movie is also set in San Francisco, so many of the scenes are shot in picturesque places. We have now established that the movie is predictable but visually appealing. The next step is whether it is any good. The answer is that it has potential.

Some parts of the movie are thoroughly enjoyable and others seriously lacking. The ending could use considerable work. While leaving the movie the viewer feels like the movie was well done but the ending rushed and unsatisfying.

My recommendation is to see the film, but it is not worth the $7.50 Edwards ticket deal. Wait for Tuesday night at the Cinaplex ($3.50).

Speaking of Edwards, not only did I see The Bachelor on opening night, I also visited the brand new Nampa Edwards. Let me first establish that I love the Boise Edwards. I love all the people, the lobby atmosphere, and I love the décor. Whenever I attend the movies at the Boise Edwards I feel like I am experiencing more than just a movie; I am going out into the nightlife of Boise. This is the reason I can rationalize shelling out $7.50 for a movie.

The question is can the Nampa Edwards supply the same feeling and satisfy my need to rationalize. Not a chance! The foyer, while bright, does not come close to supplying the same feeling as the Boise Edwards. There are several reasons for this: fewer people and a lack of noise being the most prevalent.

Needless to say, the big movie experience was definitely toned down. The new Edwards did have some nice things, however. The chairs were comfortable and they rocked plus the walls were decorated with pictures instead of decorative carpeting. The new Edwards could improve with more attendance, but at this point I would rather bring my $7.50 to Boise and really feel like I was going out.

The wait for the tub is forever since the frogs moved in

I'm wondering if any of you readers out there have noticed any suspicious behavior on the part of frogs. I ask because the ones at my house are definitely up to something.

I live in South Florida, which has a hot, moist, armpit-like climate that is very favorable for life in general. Everything down here is either already alive, or about to be. You could leave your toaster out on your lawn overnight, and by morning it would have developed legs, a tail, a mouth, tentacles, etc., and it would be prowling around looking for slower, weaker appliances to prey on.

So I am used to wildlife. I am used to the fact that, as I walk from my car to the front door — striding briskly to prevent fungus from growing on my body — I will routinely pass lizards, snakes, spiders, snails and mutant prehistoric grasshoppers large enough for the Lone Ranger to saddle up and ride into the sunset on ("Hi-ho, Silver, AWAYYYYYEEEEIIKES!").

My yard has also always had plenty of frogs. Until recently, these were plump, non-aggressive frogs who just sat there, looking pensively off into the distance, thinking frog thoughts ("How am I supposed to reproduce? I appear to lack organs!")

But lately my yard has become infested with a whole new brand of frogs — smaller, quicker, junior-welterweight frogs that are extremely jittery, as though they spent their tadpole phase swimming around in really strong espresso. And for some reason these frogs desperately want to GET INSIDE MY HOUSE. They hide in crannies on my front stoop, waiting, and when I open the front door, suddenly HOP HOP HOP HOP HOP, the stoop turns into the Oklahoma Land Rush, except that instead of hardy pioneers racing to claim homesteads, there are hordes of small, caffeine-crazed frogs bounding into my living room, moving far too fast for the human foot to stomp on.

The eerie thing is, within seconds, the invading frogs have ALL DISAPPEARED. Some go under the sofa, but many seem to simply vanish. I think maybe they've developed some kind of camouflage, so they can blend into the living-room environment by taking on the appearance of a carpet stain or (if they are really organized) a piano.

Dave Barry
 Syndicated humor columnist

All I know is, the frogs go into my house, and they do not come out, which means that there are now, by conservative estimate, thousands of frogs hiding somewhere in my living room. This makes me nervous. I'm wondering if maybe it could be a plague.

I say this because my wife is Jewish, and each year her family comes to our house to celebrate Passover with a traditional Seder feast. I am not Jewish, but I always join in, on the theory that you should embrace as many religions as possible, because you never know.

You could die and find yourself in an afterlife facing the eternal judgment of, for example, L. Ron Hubbard. So I participate in the Seder; in fact, at our house I always make the traditional matzoh balls, using an ancient Presbyterian recipe. (The matzoh balls symbolize the Old Testament story about how the Israelites, after following Moses all over the desert, finally came to a place where there was chicken soup.)

Anyway, there's this one point in the Seder ceremony when we all dip our fingers into our glasses of ancient traditional Manischewitz wine, and then we drop 10 wine droplets onto our plates while we say, out loud, the names of the Ten Plagues of Egypt, which are: blood, darkness, blight, slaying of the first born, wild beasts, lice, boils, locusts, hail and — you guessed it — Leonardo DiCaprio.

No, seriously, one of the plagues is frogs. So I'm thinking that maybe, during the most recent Seder, when we were saying the plague names, we failed to make adequate wine droplets for the frogs. My concern is that this might have violated some clause in the Old Testament, such as the Book of Effusions, chapter four, verse seven, line 6, which states: "And yea thou shalt BE sureth to maketh a GOOD frog droplet, for if thou shalt NOT, forsooth thou SHALT getteth a BIG plague of frogs; and they SHALT be of the JUNIOR-welterweight division, and they WILL hideth UNDER thine sofa." Or maybe there's some other cause.

Maybe it's a Y2K issue, and these are non-compliant frogs. Whatever it is, I don't like it. I don't like sitting in my living room at night, watching the TV, knowing that all around me, hidden in the dark, thousands of beady little eyes are also watching the TV ... and maybe waiting for some secret signal.

Perhaps you think I am crazy. Fine. Then perhaps you can explain to me why, when the frogs croak in the Budweiser commercial, my piano croaks back.

Dave Barry is a humor columnist for the Miami Herald. Write to him c/o Tropic Magazine, The Miami Herald, One Herald Plaza, Miami FL 33132.

Dilbert® by Scott Adams

Dilbert® is the property of United Media Services. Used by permission. The Crusader does not sanction or advocate occupations or working.

Top Ten Ways to impress Your Date at Dave Stillman's Piano Recital

10. It is customary to shout a loud, hearty Yee-Haw at the end of each piece. Being the first to yell will show your date just how much you know about classical music.
9. Impress your date by knowing how to pronounce the names of famous composers (Hint: Rachmaninoff rhymes with giraffe.)
8. Piano players never pause during songs for effect. If this appears to be happening, it is because one of the piano strings is broken, and the performer is waiting for someone to run up on stage and help him fix it.
7. Rachmaninoff and Chopin wrote their preludes for church, and it is customary to talk while they are being played.
6. Classical music lovers are also great fans of Disco. Remember to dress '70s.
5. Many people don't know that the pedals under a piano are used to control stage lighting. Be sure to inform your date of this little known fact.
4. It takes a good ear to tell when a performer goofs. If you don't shout "I heard that" whenever you hear a mistake, your date might never know that you're a good listener
3. Sitting near the front will make the Mosh Pit that much more accessible
2. Piano players often have big heads. Help the performer control his pride by finding him after the performance and telling him how much you hated his music
1. Bring your cell phone, in case you get hungry and want to order a pizza.

Submitted at Top Ten Cafe by:

David Stillman, in a desperate attempt to get people to come to his recital (which is on Friday, Nov. 12 at 8:00 in the Admin Auditorium)

This list is proudly sponsored by:
Top Ten Café
Thursdays • 9-12

Stop by the Top Ten Cafe at the Brick House this Thursday!
Study, relax or just hang out - See you there!

ShowTimes

Cineplex-Odeon
465-4957

Three to Tango -PG-13- 445 725 950
Superstar -PG-13- 515 715 915
Bats -PG-13- 545 745 940
The Sixth Sense -PG-13- 530 800 1030
Three Kings -R- 500 735 1015
House on Haunted Hill -R- 400 700 1000

Linden 3
454-8687

Double Jeopardy -R- 515 720 940
Pokemon G - 510 700 900
The Story of Us -R- 500 710 930

Nampa Frontier Cinemas
467-7469

Bowfinger -PG-13- 700

Karcher Reel Theatre
377-2620

Bowfinger -PG-13- 515 725 935
Inspector Gadget -PG- 720
The Thomas Crown Affair -R- 450 900

Call for midnight showings and matinees

Contact these cinemas for showtime information:
The Flicks - 342-4222
Edwards 21 - 377-1700

The theatres listed above reserve the right to change their showtimes without notice. Times are effective through Thursday.

ATTENTION ALL LOCAL GENIUSES

Do you consider yourself intelligent? An organization called Mensa is in search of the smartest people in the country. If you want to find out whether or not you qualify, contact Diane Clayton at 376-9765 by November 11.

If you think you possess superior intellect and you really don't like dumb people call Diane today.

Poorly Drawn Man - by David Stillman

One day, Gene Schandorff has an idea

- If nobody goes to chapel, we make a killing on chapel fines

Later...

Monday
Why God likes Int

Wednesday
Cheese whiz, wonder food

Friday
Praise + worship, led by campus squirrels

Chapel Attendance doubles

ooooo - we love the squirrels not a lollipop plantation

Gene's plans are ruined scratch Tahiti.

we'll be vacationing at Karcher Mall shucks - student development staff

Poorly drawn 5.99

Poorly drawn next